EGYPT is a country in Northeastern Africa, tributary to Turkey, but under the control of England. Egypt proper consists of the fertile valley of the Nile, a territory averaging eight miles wide in its fertile part, with the desert beyond, and extending 850 miles to Wady Halfa, at the Second Cataract. There are 14 provinces, with Cairo as the capital; area, 10,698 square miles; population, 6,817,265. The ruler is a hereditary despot, called the Khedive; the inhabitants are a mixture,—Egyptians, Nubians, Abyssinians, Levantines, Turks, Negroes, Armenians, Jews, and European races; the common language is Arabic, though many use the Coptic or native Egyptian tongue, and the Mohammedan religion chiefly prevails.

The prosperity of the country has ever depended on the inundation of the Nile, which begins about the middle of June at Cairo, and subsides about the middle of November.

The chronology favored by Mariette is followed until the time of the conquest by Alexander the Great; many important events, however, have additional dates, approved by other authorities. "The chronological riddle [of ancient Egypt] is unsolvable. The list of early kings furnished by Mantho, who wrote 2,000 years after their time, has no certain value." (Rawlinson.) Many of the kings have two names, a throne and a personal name. Nearly all dates have an uncertain value until the Fourth Dynasty, B. C. 4235, when the monuments afford dates for Egyptian events.

3766± * B. C. The history of Egyptian monument-building begins with Seneferu, who appears to be the same as Soris.

3733± * n. c. Khufu (Cheops) builds the Great Pyramid for his tomb.

It is the most prodigious construction ever erected by the hands of man; Herodotus says it required the labor of 100,000 men for 20 years in its construction; 10 years were previously employed in making the road from the quarry to the selected site, a distance of 3,061 feet, and constructed of highly polished stone with figures engraved upon it.

3668± * B. C. Two statues of this period [remain], representing King Khaf-Ra; they are in green basalt.

* B. C. Khaf-Ra builds the second pyramid.

"It is probable that Khaf-Ra built the small temple behind the Sphinx, which he adorned with his statues. The stones are polished, and fit to a hair's breadth." (Rawlinson.)

The pyramids are placed with astronomical exactness.

3633± * B. C. Men-kau-Ra builds a modest tomb. [Succeeding monarchs follow his example.]

Art in Egyptian statuary never surpassed this period, yet it is exceedingly inferior to that of archaic Greece.

Men-kau-Ra builds the third pyramid at Gizeh.

Monuments cease to reveal the history of Egypt [for more than 460 years].

CHURCH.

NOTE.—The religion of Egypt may naturally divide its history into three periods,—the heathen, Christian, and Mohammedan.

The following descriptions of the religion of the early Egyptians are chiefly taken from Rawlinson.

4100± * B. C. Ka-Kau (Kaiechos) introduces the worship of the bulls of Apis at Memphis; the worship of Minerva is observed at Memphis near the Delta.

The real practical religion of the primitive period is the worship of ancestors.

The sepulchral chambers are the true temples for worship in the earliest period; here hymns are sung, offerings made, and services conducted, from which both the dead and the living are expected to derive advantage.

The early Egyptians "viewed their ancestors as still living, and as interested in the condition and prospects of their descendants; they regarded them as invested with a quasi-divinity."

There appears "at the root of the Egyptian religion the belief in a future life, and of happiness or misery beyond the grave."

Embalming is practised long before the construction of the pyramids.

The composition of the Book of the Dead "was ascribed to the gods."

3666± * B. C. The queen of Khaf-Ra is high-priestess of Thoth.

3633± * B. C. In the reign of Men-kau-Ra religion no longer regards the souls of the just "as retaining their individuality in the other world, but as identified, each and all, with Osiris himself, and were thought to be at any rate temporarily absorbed into his divine being."

* B. C. King Men-kau-Ra pays special attention to religion, and dedicates himself to Ra, the sun-god, and cares for the temples.

LETTERS.

* * * B. C. The records of the first dynasties of Egypt exhibit a literature already existing and elaborated.

The walls of the interior of sepulchral chambers are covered with long inscriptions which gave the titles and employments, honors, and possessions of the deceased. "The different kinds of hieroglyphs, symbolic, determinative, phonetic, are all in use." (Rawlinson.)

4366± * B. C. King Athothis, a physician, writes anatomical books.

3766± * B. C. Seneferu, the first of the pyramid kings, "is the first Egyptian monarch who has left behind him an inscription"—the tablet at Wady Magharah. (Rawlinson.)

SOCIETY.

4066± * B. C. In the reign of Ba-eneter (Binotris) a law is passed permitting women to hold the sovereign power.

3733± * B. C. Egyptian society is divided into classes. Intolerable bondage is caused by the labor of building the pyramids.

3633± * B. C. Men-kau-Ra selects a youth named Petah-ases from among the common people, and rears him in the palace with his own children.

STATE.

5004± * -3064± * B. C. The Ancient Empire; it lasts 1,940 years.

The foundation of the Egyptian monarchy begins. (Mariette.)

I. Dynasty: It is established at Thisin in Upper Egypt.

4400± * B. C. Mena is the first authentic king.

Mena, or Misraim, the half mythical founder of the nation, is said to have conquered lower Egypt, and built his capital at Memphis. (Böckh, B. C. 5702; Unger, 5613; Lenormant, 5004; Brugsch-Bey, 4453; Lauth, 4157; Lepsius, 3892; Eunsen, 3628; Poole, 2717; Wilkinson, 2691; Rawlinson, 2700.)

4366± * B. C. Teta reigns. He founds the palace at Memphis. [4333, Atet; 4300, Ata; 4266, Hesept-i; 4233, Mer-ba-pen; 4200, Semen-Ptah; 4166, Qebu.]

II. Dynasty: Established at Thisin in Upper Egypt.

4133± * B. C. Neter-bain (Boethoser Butan) reigns. [4100, Ka-Kau (Kaiechos).]

4066± * B. C. Ba-en-eter (Binotris) reigns. A law is passed decreeing that women may hold the sovereign power. [4033, Uat, -nes; 4000, Senta.]

III. Dynasty: Established at Memphis in Middle Egypt, south of Cairo, on the Nile.

3966± * B. C. T'a't'ai reigns.

3933± * B. C. Neb-Ka (Necherophes) reigns. The Libyans revolt, and then return to their allegiance. [3900, Ser; 3866, Teta; 3833, Set'es; 3800, Neter-ka-Ra and Humi reign.]

3766± * B. C. Seneferu (Seneferu, or Soris) reigns. Prosperity attends this good and beneficent king.

IV. Dynasty: Established at Memphis in Middle Egypt; it has been called the pyramid dynasty, and is the culminating period of the Ancient Empire.

* B. C. Egyptian history now emerges from the mists of obscurity, and discloses a genuine and progressive civilization.

3733± * B. C. Khufu (Supsih, or Cheops) reigns.

He is the greatest king of this period, and distinguishes his reign by building the Great Pyramid; he holds his people in a condition of intolerable bondage while building his monuments.

3700± * B. C. Tat-f-Ra (Ratati) reigns.

3666± * Khaf-Ra (Shafra) reigns. [He is the first of the kings who has given to modern times his statue; two of the statues are known.]

ARMY — NAVY.

- 3533± * * B. C. King Sabu-Ra leads a military expedition into the Sinaitic region of Arabia.
- * * The kings of this period are disinclined to war.
- 3433± * * B. C. User-en-Ra leads a military expedition into the Sinaitic peninsula.
- 3233± * * B. C. A martial spirit is first seen in the VI. Dynasty; Uua, the commanding general for King Pepi I., conducts five military expeditions against the Herusha, who dwell in the desert east of lower Egypt.
- 3166± * * B. C. Pepi II. is the first Egyptian king given to war.
- He leads an expedition into the Sinaitic peninsula against Mentuon and another against the Amu and the Herusha; he also subdues the negroes, and gathers an immense army for his expeditions; the war spirit inspires his people.
- 2466± * * 2266± * * B. C. The Egyptian kings carry on military operations against the troublesome Ethiopians; the fortresses of Kumneh and Semeh are built on either side of the Nile to protect the realm from invaders.

ART — SCIENCE — NATURE.

- 3566± * * B. C. User-ka-f builds a small pyramid, and calls it Uab-asu, "the most holy of all places."
- ± Dancing of a solemn and formal movement, with the sexes apart from each other, is practised; the harp, flute, and pipe are employed at banquets.
- 3533± * * B. C. King Sahu-Ra erects a pyramid, and calls it Sha-ba, or "the rising of the soul."
- 3500± * * B. C. Kakaa begins the tomb of Ti, "the marvel of Succarah."
- 3433± * * B. C. User-en-Ra builds the Pyramid of Abousir, the smallest of the three great pyramids, the base being only 274 feet square, and the elevation 171 feet and four inches. Many magnificent tombs are erected in his reign.
- 3400± * * B. C. Representations of King Men-kau-Hor are cut in relief on the walls of the great Serapeum near Memphis.
- 3166± * * B. C. King Pepi builds a pyramid tomb which he calls Mennefer, "the good abode;" he repairs the Temple of Athor at Denderah and Hammanat.
- 3066± * * 2630± * * B. C. For a period of 436 years the monuments are almost silent respecting the history of Egypt.
- 2433± * * B. C. Uerseten erects the obelisk of pink granite [which still stands], 66 feet high, upon the site of Heliopolis; "the earliest monument of the kind possessing any considerable grandeur." (Rawlinson.)
- * * * B. C. Uerseten constructs temples at Tanis, at Abydos, and Eleutheria, "which were adorned with sculptures, inscriptions, and colossal statues."
- 2400± * * B. C. Indigo-dyeing is known.
- 2300± * * 2266± * * B. C. Amen-em-hat III. is famous for his engineering works; he builds a dam 27 miles long, averaging 30 feet high, by which the artificial lake called Moeris is formed; it is 14 miles long, 6 to 11 wide, and covers 40 square miles; it is constructed for storing water. He also builds the famous Labyrinth, a large palace for ceremonial acts and sacrifices.
- ± * * B. C. The Temple of Ammon is commenced by Amen-em-hat, at Karnak, opposite Thebes.
- He also builds a palace adorned with gold, having a roof of blue, and walls of stones fastened together with iron clamps; he said it was made for eternity [but it has disappeared].
- 2240± * * B. C. Glass is known and used.
- 2000± * * B. C. XV. and XVI. Dynasties; The Hyksos arrest the production of art; no monument exposes this miserable period of Egyptian history. (Mariette.)
- Glass and pottery increase in elegance; the Egyptians brew beer from barley; tanning is known.
- 1700± * * 1400± * * B. C. Egyptian architecture reaches its highest perfection under the XVIII. and XIX. Dynasties.
- The arts of life are much developed; costumes are more elaborate; houses more artistic and increased provision for comfort appear. Horses are introduced from Asia; the chariot takes the place of the palanquin. "The young dandy prided himself on the strength and lightness of his vehicle, the perfect shape and condition of his carriage horses, the beauty of their trappings, and his own skill in driving them." (Rawlinson.)
- * * * B. C. Aahmes is a liberal patron of art; his colossi are immense.
- XVIII. Dynasty: Monuments are erected along the Nile in both Upper and Lower Egypt.
- * * * B. C. The hypogea of Beni-Hasan and of Sint are erected during the time of the Middle Empire; also the Colossi of San and of Abydos and the obelisks of Materiyeh and Beyig.
- XVIII. Dynasty: Queen Hatshepsu commences the two great obelisks at Karnak, one of which is completed and crowned with pyramids of pure gold taken from conquered foes; she also builds the Temple of Der-el-Bahari.

CHURCH.

- 3533± * * B. C. Sahu-Ra announces himself on his sculpture as "the great god who strikes down all nations."
- Sahu-Ra names the pyramid he erects Sha-ba, "the rising of the soul," to mark his belief in the resurrection of the dead.
- 3466± * * B. C. Nefer-t-Ra builds a pyramid tomb called Menaukh, "the abode of life."
- * * * B. C. The Egyptians divide their gods into two classes, the universal and the local.
- 3433± * * B. C. User-en-Ra takes the titles of divinity, the great god, lord of the two lands, king of Egypt, king of the - upper and lower countries conquering Horus, and son of the Sun.

- * * * B. C. During the V. Dynasty the ancient gods are worshipped, including Ra, Set, Thoth, Hor, Osiris, Isis-Athor, Ptah, and Anubis; there are traces of the worship of Nut, Seb, Khen, Kneph, Neith, Ma, Saf, and Heka.
- * * * B. C. The "prophets" include persons of both sexes. The passage of souls through the lower world is plainly taught. Osiris is worshipped as the great ruler of the dead. Animal worship is practised; a white bull and a sacred heifer are regarded as possessing a divine character.
- * * * B. C. The Sothiac festival is first discovered during the XI. Dynasty; feasts are held at stated periods in honor of the gods Khem, Ptah-Sokari, and Thoth.
- * * * B. C. Ammon, the great god, is worshipped; his chief temple and oracle is at Thebes.
- * * * B. C. XII. Dynasty: Religion is modified by the elevation of Ammon to the headship of the Pantheon.
- * * * B. C. Sabak is advanced "from a local or subordinate position to one of high rank among the universal divinities of the country." (Rawlinson.)
- * * * B. C. The kings are more absolutely worshipped than in previous dynasties.
- 2876± * * B. C. Abraham visits Egypt. (Wilkinson.)
- * * * B. C. Joseph, the Hebrew slave, is elevated to the office of prime minister under one of the Shepherd kings, probably Apepi; and being of a kindred race, it more easily explains his remarkable promotion.
- Apepi introduces the worship of Set, or Sutekh, into the Delta, and sends a message to Sakenen-Ra, a native prince, to give up the worship of Amen-Ra, and honor the new divinity alone; his refusal brings on general war and the expulsion of the Hyksos.
- 2754± * * B. C. The Israelites migrate from Canaan to Egypt. (Wilkinson.)
- * * * B. C. The Hyksos are monotheists, and hate polytheism, therefore they destroy the temples indiscriminately and with them the records they contain; they also forbid the worship of the native gods.
- 1700± * * B. C. Aahmes restores the temples which had been thrown down by the Hyksos.

LETTERS.

- 3366± * * B. C. A papyrus is written during the reign of Tat-Ka-ra by Ptah-hotep, "probably the most ancient manuscript in the world."
- "Its subject is the proper conduct of life, and the advantages to be derived from right behavior; it is called the book of the Prince Ptah-hotep. The writer says he is 110 years old when writing." (Rawlinson.)
- * * * B. C. "Literature grows in repute as a profession." (Rawlinson.)
- * * * B. C. The birth of history occurs in the form of a lengthy biographical memoir of an official, which is inscribed on his tomb.

SOCIETY.

3566 * * B. C. During the VI. Dynasty simplicity of dress yields to ornamentation; wine becomes an important product of the land; both wine and beer are drunk by the Egyptians.

3066 ± * * B. C. Queen Nitocris avenges the assassination of her brother by inveigling his murderers into a subterranean gallery, where they are drowned by flooding the passage.

* * * B. C. During the XI. Dynasty Egypt is the only country in the world that is both cultivated and civilized; barbarism abounds elsewhere.

2466 ± * * B. C. During the XII. Dynasty civilization advances in all of its branches, especially during the reign of Usertsen III.

* * * B. C. The second civilization of Egypt occurs.

Unlike the first, which "was egoistic, self-seeking, stately, cold, cruel," it "was utilitarian, beneficent, appealing less to the eye than to the mind, but judicious, far-sighted in its aims, and most successful in the results." (Rawlinson.)

* * * B. C. Productive pursuits supplant monument building; the welfare of subjects, instead of the glorification of rulers, becomes the aim of civilization.

* * * B. C. Luxury increases; "Palaces are painted, and adorned with gold."

Bracelets are worn by both men and women and anklets by the latter exclusively; men sometimes wear artificial beards attached to their wigs; grantees are carried in highly ornamented litters. (Rawlinson.)

2240 ± * * B. C. XV. and XVI. Dynasties: The invading Hyksos massacre the people, and pillage and destroy the temples with their records; after a time they adopt the ways and dress of the Egyptians.

* * * B. C. The civilization of Egypt is annihilated by the Hyksos, but an improved civilization follows. (Rawlinson.)

* * * B. C. In the XVIII. and XIX. Dynasties indecency of dress is common.

* * * B. C. Punishment is inflicted by the bastinado on both men and women stripped naked.

* * * B. C. Captives are subject to slavery or death.

* * * B. C. To keep the fealty of the slaves, their bodies are systematically mutilated.

* * * B. C. Polygamy is introduced, and honored by royal prestige.

STATE.

3633 * * B. C. Men-kau-Ra (Mencheres), the founder of the third pyramid, reigns; he is a just ruler and a kind man.

3600 * * B. C. Shepses-ka-f reigns.

V. Dynasty: Established at Elephantine, near the First Cataract.

3566 * * B. C. User-ka-f reigns. [3533, Sahu-Ra; 3500, Kakaa.]

3466 * * B. C. Nefer-f-Ra (Shepses-ka-Ra) reigns. He has a double name, both a throne and personal name, like many following kings.

3433 * * User-en-Ra and An reign.

3400 * * B. C. Men-kau-hor reigns. He is enthroned while yet a youth.

3366 * * B. C. Tat-Ka-Ra (Assa) reigns. [3333, Unas.]

VI. Dynasty: Established at Memphis.

A new family succeeds to the throne, having its origin at Memphis. History begins to assume greater importance, and Egypt begins to appear as a united monarchy.

3300 * * B. C. Teta reigns. [3266, User-ka-Ra (Ati); 3233, Meri-Ra (Pepi I.); he has a long and successful reign.]

3200 * * B. C. Mer-en-Ra (Hor-em-sa-f) reigns, succeeding his father in a short reign. Una is made governor of Upper Egypt.

3166 * * B. C. Nefer-Ka-Ra (Pepi II., or Apappus) succeeds his older brother; he reigns 20 years, and is described as a giant. [Many believe that his mother was associated with her son.]

3133 * * B. C. Mer-en-se (?)-em-sa-f reigns.

3100 * * B. C. Neter-ka-Ra reigns.

3066 * * B. C. Men-ka-Ra (Nit-agert, or Queen Nitocris) reigns. [She is the only queen having a sole reign; she is celebrated for her beauty and nobility of mind.]

[3066-2600 B. C. The monuments give scarcely any information.]

VII.-XI. Dynasties: Egypt is disintegrated.

The kingdoms of Memphis, Heracleopolis, and Thebes are mentioned; and the latter becomes a free city of much importance, and the seat of sovereign power.

Civilization appears arrested, and Egypt seems to disappear from the nations for 436 years.

3033 * * B. C. Nefer-ka-Ra reigns. [3000, Nefer-ka-Ra-nebi; 2966, Tat-ka-Ra-Maat; 2933, Nefer-ka-Ra-khentu; 2900, Mer-en-Hor; 2866, Se-nefer-ka-Ra; 2833, Ka-en-Ra; 2800, Nefer-ka-Ra-terer; 2766, Nefer-ka-Hor; 2733, Nefer-ka-Ra-Pepi-senh; 2700, Nefer-ka-Ra-annu; 2666, Nefer-ka-Ra.]

* * The Middle Kingdom: Extending from the XI. Dynasty to the XVIII. It lasts 1,361 years.

2600 * * B. C. Nefer-kau-Hor reigns.

2566 * * B. C. Nefer-ari-ka-Ra reigns.

2533 * * B. C. Neb-kher-Ra (Mentu-hotep V.) reigns. He sinks wells in the desert for the use of caravans, and extends commerce.

* * * Many immigrants arrive in fertile Egypt.

2500 * * B. C. Se-ankh-ka-Ra reigns at Thebes.

XII. Dynasty: Established in Upper Egypt.

Thebes is chosen for the first time the seat of sovereign power; the nation awakes from its long slumbers; great changes take place, so that old family names, the titles of officials, the writing, and even the religion seem new.

* * * B. C. A brilliant epoch follows the long night of 436 years. The Usertsens and Amen-em-hats become forever famous.

2466 * * B. C. Se-hotep-ab-Ra (Amen-em-hat I.), the founder, rules with great energy and success, and probably extends the power of Egypt up the Nile and over a part of Nubia.

2433 * * B. C. Kheper-ka-Ra (Usertsen I.) succeeds his father, after being associated with him for a few years.

One of a famous line of energetic kings, he reigns for 35 years after his father's death; the Empire is in the highest prosperity since the IV. Dynasty; he continues the conquests of Amen-em-hat I., and erects obelisks.

2400 * * B. C. Nub-kau-Ra (Amen-em-hat II.) succeeds his father, after being associated with him for six years, and reigns alone for 13 years; the Empire flourishes.

2366 * * Kha-kheper-Ra (Usertsen II.) reigns, and prosperity continues.

2333 * * B. C. Kha-ka-Ra (Usertsen III.) reigns. [He is one of the most famous kings of this dynasty.]

He introduces a settled government in Nubia, and annexes Northern Nubia; Egyptian civilization is probably at its highest point.

2300 * * Maat-en-Ra (Amen-em-hat III.) reigns for 43 years, and builds the famous Labyrinth, and constructs Lake Moeris. (See Art.)

2266 * * B. C. Mant-Khern-Ra (Amen-em-hat IV.) reigns. His sister Sabaknefr-Ra reigns conjointly with him for the last four years.

XIII. Dynasty: Established at Thebes. [Time, 433 years.]

The Nefer-hoteps and Sebek-hoteps are preeminent; the prosperity of Egypt continues.

2240 * * B. C. (Wilkinson's date.) Probable invasion of Lower Egypt by the Hyksos, or Shepherd kings, about the close of the XIII. Dynasty. They are wandering tribes of Semitic descent. (Mariette.)

* * B. C. (Wilkinson's date.) Salatis, the first of the Shepherd kings, reigns; he is followed by Beon, then Apachme Apophis, Janias, and Assis, the founders of the line.

XIV. Dynasty: Established at Xoite in the Delta. [Time, 184 years.] "We know absolutely nothing of the XIV. Dynasty." (Mariette.)

XV. Dynasty: Established at Thebes; a sudden decline of the glory of Egypt ensues.

Civilization is brought to a standstill by the invading Hyksos, who subdue northern Egypt for four centuries, while the kings are banished into the Thebaid, with the invaders for neighbors and probably for masters.

XVI. Dynasty: Established at Thebes; rival sovereigns in Upper and Lower Egypt continue.

XVII. Dynasty: Sekenen-Ra reigns; rival sovereigns continue; and Upper Egypt is a thoroughly civilized state, and Lower Egypt is recovering; a fresh dynasty of the Hyksos (Khetas) begins in Lower Egypt, at Tanis; the barbarous Hyksos become in a measure civilized through the reaction of Egyptian civilization upon them.

2240 ± * * B. C. The Hyksos invaders take Memphis, and establish a garrison in Egypt of 240,000 men.

ARMY - NAVY.

* * * B. C. Thothmes III. invades Asia, subdues Syria, and enters Mesopotamia. (See State.)

* * * Thothmes III. defeats the Hittites in a great battle at Megiddo (in Palestine); he takes 5,900 prisoners, 924 chariots, and great booty.

1566 ± * * B. C. Amenophis II. captures Nineveh.

1366 ± * * B. C. Seti I. invades and conquers Northern Syria, defeats the Hittites, and leads military expeditions into Arabia and Ethiopia.

1333 ± * * B. C. Ramses II. engages in war on land and sea, and has many brilliant victories; he subdues the revolting negroes and the Ethiopians in the south, fights the Khetas (Hittites) in Asia for 18 years, and then makes a treaty of peace with them.

1300 ± * * Libyans having fair hair and blue eyes invade the desert west of the Delta.

± * * B. C. The army of Egypt is overwhelmed in the Red Sea while pursuing the fugitive Hebrews.

1200 ± * * B. C. Ramses III. engages in many wars on sea and land.

He defeats the Shashu, of the Palestine desert, called the Bedawin plunderers of the monuments, the Libyans of Africa, and the confederate nations of Asia Minor; he also repels the invasion of the Mashusha of North Africa.

ART - SCIENCE - NATURE.

1500 ± * * B. C. Amenophis III. raises monuments unsurpassed in grandeur and perfection of finish.

He erects the Temple of Gebel-Barkal in Sudan and that at Soleh near the third cataract, also a part of the temple at Luxor.

He erects one of the most important edifices on the Nile. [Now destroyed, and only two colossi remaining.]

Amenophis III. as a builder "may claim a place among the most distinguished Egyptian monarchs." (Rawlinson.)

He erects magnificent palaces and temples at Thebes; two gigantic statues representing the king in sitting posture which were nearly 70 feet high [yet remain].

1461 ± * * B. C. Thothmes III. becomes "one of the greatest of Egyptian builders and patrons of art." (Rawlinson.)

He erects immense obelisks, two of which are 162 feet high, two others of 165 feet. [One of these now stands in Rome before the Church of St. John Lateran; one of his monoliths, which originally adorned the entrance to the Temple of the Sun at Heliopolis, has been removed to London, and another to Central Park, New York.]

1400 ± * * B. C. The arch is used in architecture.

1366 ± * * B. C. Seti I. erects the great hypostyle hall at Karnak, called the Hall of Columns, a masterpiece of architecture, also the grand Temple of Abydos; and during his reign the subterranean tomb of the king is excavated at Bab-el-Moluk. (Mariette.)

Seti is the first to join the Red Sea and the Nile by a canal; he sinks an artesian well on the caravan road to Gebel-Atokk. (Mariette.)

1333 ± * * B. C. Ramses II. is the greatest of all the builders.

Among his works are the two temples of Abu-Simbel, the Ramesseum at Thebes, the small temple at Abydos, and many large buildings elsewhere. (Mariette.)

[He builds obelisks, statues, and colossi; one of his monoliths now stands on the Place de la Concorde in Paris; it is a pink syenite granite shaft exquisitely carved, and is 82 feet high.]

Ramses II., by slave-labor, builds the "Great Wall," 90 miles long, extending from Pelusium to Heliopolis; he covers Egypt with magnificent buildings, and constructs "the House of Ramses," south of Karnak, and the Temple of Ammon; also the "Great Canal" from the Nile to the Red Sea.

1200 ± * * B. C. Ramses III. constructs the magnificent temple at Medinet-Habu.

BIRTHS - DEATHS.

1500 B. C. Sesostris, king, born and dies.

1492 B. C. Ramses I., king, born.

CHURCH.

* * * B. C. Thothmes II., of the XVIII. Dynasty, is a devotee of the god Ammon, whose temple he improves.

1800 ± * * B. C. The Israelites live peaceably in Egypt under the reign of Thothmes III. of the XVIII. Dynasty.

1466 ± * * B. C. Amenophis IV. introduces the Semitic religion.

* * * B. C. A religious revolution occurs; Amenophis IV. becomes a heretic.

He advocates the substitution of monotheism in sun worship for the ancient worship, and is bitterly opposed by the priests of the old religion; he proscribes the worship of Amen, the supreme deity; Amenoph is substituted, and the temples are despoiled which are dedicated to Amen.

1433 ± * * B. C. King Horus restores the old Egyptian polytheistic worship. (1364, Rawlinson.)

* * * B. C. In the XX. Dynasty, it appears, from the calendar of feasts, that during the first five months of the year one day in five is observed as sacred.

1400 ± * * B. C. "Ramses I. names his eldest son Seti, a name commonly written with the figure of the god Set, and implying a dedication of his first-born to that divinity." (Rawlinson.)

* * * B. C. About 40 deities are worshipped by the Egyptians.

1366 ± * * B. C. Seti favors the old polytheistic religion, as policy requires him to do.

1333 ± * * B. C. Ramses II. surpasses other kings in fostering king-worship by associating himself with Phthah during his lifetime, and also with Ammon and Horus, claiming equally religious regards from his subjects.

1300 ± * * B. C. Moses appears at the court of Menepth II., the son of Ramses the Great, and intercedes for the Hebrews.

* * * B. C. Sacrilege becomes fashionable; the bodies of the dead are treated with ill-usage and contempt.

1100 ± * * B. C. The priest-order increases in power, and finally dominates the throne, and claims royal honors and authority.

LETTERS.

1670 ± * * B. C. A galaxy of writers appears in the XVIII. and XIX. Dynasties. Among them is Pentaur the "epic poet," who celebrates the victories of Ramses II. "History, divinity, practical philosophy, poetry, epistolary correspondence, novels, or tales, occupied the attention of numerous writers." (Rawlinson.)

"A public library is established at Thebes, under a director named Amenem-su" (Rawlinson). Copies of earlier writings are made, such as The Instructions of Amenem-hat, The Tale of the Two Brothers, The Praise of Learning, and the larger part of The Book of the Dead.

1600 ± * * B. C. A chronology of the kings of Egypt is arranged by Thothmes III.

SOCIETY.

1633 ± * * B. C. Thothmes I. is "married to a wife, Aahmes, who is thought to have been his sister."

1566 ± * * B. C. Queen Hatshepsu assumes male apparel, and the style and title of a king.

* * * B. C. Slave-labor enables Thothmes III. to accomplish his numerous great creations in architecture, as shown by the figures and writings of monuments. (Rawlinson, 1461.)

1500 ± * * B. C. Female influence is conspicuous in the reign of Amenophis III.

* * * B. C. Bricks are made by slave-labor for erecting temples and other buildings, while overseers with stick in hand look on.

1333 ± * * B. C. Ramses II. marries a Hittite princess.

He takes many captives in his African war, who become slaves; slave-hunting expeditions are organized.

* * * B. C. Ramses II. becomes the father of 59 sons and 60 daughters. [He was probably a polygamist.]

* * * B. C. Ramses II. becomes the enemy of his royal father's fame, and erases his name from many monuments, and substitutes his own.

1230 ± * * B. C. A thieves' society is organized for robbing royal tombs; some of its members belong to the priest-class.

* * * B. C. The grossest social indecency is manifested.

* * * B. C. Monkeys are kept as pets.

1200 ± * * B. C. Ramses III. plants trees and shrubs over the whole land of Egypt to give the inhabitants shade.

* * * B. C. Public safety is accomplished by good government; "The weakest woman could travel unmolested whither-soever she wished." (Rawlinson.)

* * * B. C. A belief in the power of magic prevails.

It is thought possible to compass the death of another, to bewitch his mind, or to paralyze his limbs, by the use of wax figures and a traditional formula.

* * * B. C. Female conspirators against Rames III. are "condemned to the penal servitude of keeping a beer-house, which is thought sufficient punishment for ladies of delicacy and refinement." (Rawlinson.)

* * * B. C. Society is classified as priests, warriors, herdsmen, artificers, husbandmen, interpreters, huntsmen, and boatmen.

STATE.

1700 ± * * B. C. The Hyksos King Apepi picks a quarrel with the native Prince Ra-Sekenen, ruler of Upper Egypt, which results in a general Egyptian uprising against the Hyksos, and finally in their expulsion.

* * * B. C. Aahmes carries on war for five years against the Hyksos, both by land and water.

He leads a military expedition against the negroes of the south, and eventually subdues them; he also leads an army into Palestine, and later forces his way into Nubia.

XVIII. Dynasty: The New Empire (1670-525, Lepsius; 1525, Rawlinson); established at Thebes; it lasts 1,371 years. The Empire, reunited, revives and prospers; the losses of five centuries are soon regained; viceroys are sent into the Sudan.

Egyptian garrisons are stationed on the Euphrates and Tigris, and also in Mesopotamia.

* * * B. C. Neb-peh-tet-Ra (Aahmes I., Amosis, or Amasis I.) reigns.

He advances Egypt to the zenith of her fame, after driving out the Hyksos. [His coffin and mummy are now in the museum of Gizeh.]

Aahmes marries the black Ethiopian princess, who takes the name of Nefertari-Aahmes, or "the beautiful companion of Aahmes." (1499, Rawlinson.)

1666 * * B. C. Ser-ka-Ra (Amen-hotep I., or Amenophis I.) succeeds his father; he enlarges the northern and southern frontiers of Egypt.

Taxation is heavy during the XVIII. and XIX. Dynasties.

1633 * * B. C. (1478, Rawlinson.) Aa-kheper-ka-Ra (Tehuti-mes I.) reigns; Amenset regent; he reigns 21 years; Egypt becomes a conquering nation.

± * * B. C. Thothmes I. invades Asia, and ravages Syria and Mesopotamia, and makes conquests in Nubia and Assyria.

1600 * * B. C. Aa-kheper-en-Ra (Tehuti-mes II. or Thothmes II.) and his sister Makara reign; he succeeds his father, and subdues the country above the Cataracts, and annexes it.

* * * B. C. Maat-ka-Ra (Hat-shepsut-khenem-Amen, or Queen Hatshepsu) reigns.

She is the guardian of her brother, the young king, and rules as nominal regent, but actually an usurper for 17 years, in which she has a brilliant reign. Hat-shepsu is the daughter of Thothmes I., and the wife of Thothmes II.; she enters into notable commercial relations with Punt, a country bordering the Gulf [of Aden].

* * * B. C. The New Empire rapidly rises to power, and extends its territory.

* * * B. C. (1461, Rawlinson; 1438-1388, Lepsius.) Men-kheper-Ra (Tehuti-mes II. or Thothmes III.) reigns.

He succeeds his brother when probably a mere child, and reigns 47 years; on his accession his sister Hat-shepsu continues to take a part in public affairs; after her death he becomes the greatest of Egyptian monarchs; order and progress prevail; Egypt is expanded; "she placed her frontier where she would;" tribute is exacted of Babylon. Egypt includes Abyssinia, the Sudan, Nubia, Syria, Mesopotamia, Irak-Arabia, Kurdistan, and Armenia.

Thothmes III. gathers enormous tribute or booty from subject countries; "above 11,000 captives, 1,670 chariots, 3,639 horses, 4,391 larger cattle, more than 35,000 goats, silver to the amount of 3,940 pounds, and gold 9,064 pounds."

1566 * * B. C. Aa-kheperu-Ra (Amen-hotep-neter-haq-Annu II., or Amenophis II.) succeeds his father, and reigns ten years.

1533 * * B. C. Men-kheperu-Ra (Tehuti-mes IV., or Thothmes IV.) reigns 31 years, and preserves the vast empire secured by Thothmes the Great.

1500 * * B. C. (1400, Rawlinson.) Maat-neb-Ra (Amen-hotep-haq-Uast, or Amenophis III.) reigns.

He consolidates the vast Empire, and makes successful expeditions against the Syrians and against the Ethiopians.

1466 * * B. C. Nefer-kheperu-Ra-u-a-en-Ra (Amen-hotep-haq-Uast, or Khun-Aten, also Amen-hotep IV., or Amenophis IV.) reigns.

He has three names, the third by his change of religion; being opposed because of his religious innovations, he builds the new city of Khu-aten, and there establishes his court.

1433 * * B. C. Ser-kheperu-Ra-sotep-en-Ra (Amen-meri-en-Hor-en-bet, or Horus) reigns.

He is a wise and able ruler, and maintains the unity of the great Empire; one generation of heretic kings.

XIX. Dynasty: Established at Thebes in Upper Egypt.

1400 * * B. C. (1424, Rawlinson.) Men-peh-tet-Ra (Ra-messu, or Ramses I.) reigns.

1366 * * B. C. (1438-1388, Lepsius; 1322, Rawlinson.) Men-Maat-Ra (Amen-meri-en-Seti, or Seti I., also called Meri-en-Ptah, or Meneptah I.) reigns.

* * * Repeated revolts break out against Egypt in Western Asia.

1333 * * B. C. (1388-92, Lepsius; 1311, Rawlinson.) User-Maat-Ra-sotep-en-Ra (Ra-messu-meri-Amen, or Ramses II., the Great) succeeds Seti, his father; he is the greatest of all the Egyptian builders, and the probable oppressor of the Hebrews.

* * * Revolts occur in the Sudan and in Syria; expeditions are necessary to suppress them, and they are not successful in Asia; he concludes an alliance offensive and defensive with the Hittites (Khetas), after a great battle; he reigns 67 years, and has 170 children. [Tradition transforms him into a military hero, known to the Greeks as Sesostris, or Sesoosis, making fabulous expeditions to Thrace and India.]

1300 * * B. C. (1322-02, Lepsius; 1245 Rawlinson.) Ba-en-Ra-meri-en-Amen (Ptah-meri-en-hotep-her-Maat, or Meneptah II.), the 13th son, succeeds his father, and has a troubled reign. Moses, the appointed leader of Israel, appears at court to intercede for the Hebrews.

* * * B. C. The Israelites escape from Egypt, and the king perishes in the Red sea.

1280 * * -1100 * * B. C. During this period Egyptian history is almost wholly a blank. (Rawlinson.)

1266 * * B. C. Khu-en-Ra-sotep-en-Ra (Ptah-meri-en-Seti, or Meneptah III.) reigns.

1233 * * B. C. User-khan-Ra-meri-Amen (Ra-meri-Amen-merer-Set-nekht, or Set-nekht) reigns.

XX. Dynasty: Established at Thebes.

1200 * * B. C. (1269, Lepsius; 1219, Rawlinson.) User-Maat-Ra-meri-Amen (Rameses-haq-Annu, or Ramses III.) reigns 31 years, and divides the officials in five classes.

* * * B. C. Revolts in Asia and the Sudan; the unity of the Empire weakens. Egyptian authority in Syria is only nominal.

1166 * * B. C. User-Ra-sotep-en-Amen (Ra-meses-meri-Amen-Ra-haq-Maat or Ramses IV.) reigns.

* * * B. C. The collapse of Egypt commences after a glorious period of more than three centuries.

* * * B. C. User-Maat-Ra-sotep-en-kheper-Ra (Ra-meses-meri-Amen-User-suten-f, or Ramses V., the usurper) reigns. [* * * Ra-Amen-Maat-meri-neb (Ra-Amen-meses-neter-Annu, or Ramses VI.) (Rawlinson, 1280); * * * Ra-user-Amen-meri-sotep-en-Ra (Ra-Amen-meses-ta-neter-haq-Annu, or Ramses VII.); * * * Ra-user-Maat-khu-en-Amen (Ra-Amen-meses-meri-Amen, or Ramses VIII.); * * * Se-kha-en-Ra-Meri-Amen (Ra-meses-se-Ptah, or Ramses IX.); * * * Nefer-kau-Ra-sotep-en-Ra (Ra-meses-merer-Amen-kha-Uast (?), or Ramses X.); * * * Ra-kheper-Maat-sotep-en-Ra (Rames-suten-Amen, or Ramses XI.); * * * User-Maat-Ra-sotep-nu-Ra (Amen-meri-Ra-meses, or Ramses XII.) reigns for 33 years.]

1133 * * B. C. Men-Maat-Ra-sotep-en-Ra (Ra-meses-merer-Amen-kha-Uast-neter-haq-Annu, or Ramses XIII.) reigns 26 years.

* * * B. C. The high priests forcibly appropriate the crown of the Pharaohs.

* * * B. C. The Empire is reduced to the smallest limits, the conquered territories having fallen off one by one.

* * * B. C. Egypt is surrounded by enemies more powerful than herself.

XXI. Dynasty: Established at Tanis in the Delta.

The Empire is divided; the self-made sacerdotal kings reign at Thebes and the legitimate dynasty at Tanis; the former choose Semitic names for their sons; Asiatic influence locates the capital in the Delta.

ARMY—NAVY.

* * * B. C. Aa-kheper-Ra, also called Shah [aah] IV., reigns. Under Sheshonk IV. Egypt is disintegrated by internal dissensions, with rival dynasties.

XXIII. Dynasty: Established at Tanis.

Northern Egypt is divided into several petty states; the Sudan becomes independent in the South.

766 * * * B. C. Amen-meri-Peta-se-Bast reigns.

* * * B. C. Aa-kheper-Ra-sotep-en-Amen, also called Ra-Amen-meri-Usarken, (Osorkun III.), reigns.

XXIV. Dynasty: Established at Sais in the Delta. [Time, six years.]

733 * * * B. C. Bakenranf (Bocchoris) reigns six years; he is captured by Sabaco, the invader, who burns him alive, and occupies the country as far as the Mediterranean.

XXV. Dynasty: It is Ethiopian. [Time, 60 years.]

* * * B. C. Pa-ankhi (Piankhi) and his queen, Ameniritis, reigning at Thebes, become tributary to the Sudan.

* * * B. C. Pa-ankhi, having defeated all rival claimants to the throne, permits the small princes to rule as vassals.

700 * * * B. C. Nefer-ka-Ra, also called Shahaka, or Sabaco, reigns; he is an Ethiopian who first conquers, and then rules Egypt as a conquered province. (704, Rawlinson.)

Sabaco is called So in the Bible; Hosea, King of Israel, sends him presents by an embassy, and a treaty is made; Hosea is promised assistance against Assyria (but the promise is not kept). He loses a great part of Egypt when defeated by the Assyrians.

* * * B. C. Tat-kan-Ra, also called Shabataka (Sebicus, or Shabatok), reigns.

He succeeds his father in Upper Egypt, and loses Ethiopia; and is slain by Tirhakah, the Ethiopian king, after a reign of 14 years.

* * * B. C. Ra-nefer-tem-Karu, also called Taharqa (Tirbakah, Farcus).

After reigning 26 years, 12 Egyptian chiefs unite their forces to expel the Ethiopians from the Northern provinces, and then assume royal authority over the 12 Kingdoms into which they divide the country; they rule for 15 years. (Some authorities discredit this account.) (690, Rawlinson.)

672 * * * B. C. The Assyrians, under Esarhaddon and his son Sardanapalus, capture Memphis and Thebes, and entirely destroy Ethiopian rule, and appoint 29 governors, who are chiefly natives, to administer the government; they rule for three years. (Lepsius.)

XXVI. Dynasty: Established at Sais in the Delta; time, 38 years.

The Empire is prosperous, but its military fame is almost extinguished.

666 * * * B. C. Uah-ab-Ra, also called Psamthek (Psammetichus I.), reigns. (653, Lepsius; 664, Rawlinson.)

He dethrones two kings (according to some authorities), overthrows the Ethiopians, and reconquers Egyptian territory as far south as the First Cataract.

* * * B. C. By the aid of allies, Uah-ab-Ra overthrows the Assyrian rule, and becomes independent sovereign. The Greeks settle in Egypt, and the country revives. Jerusalem pays tribute; emigrants settle along the Nile as far as Ethiopia. (Lepsius.)

612 * * * B. C. Nem-ab-Ra, also called Nekau (Necho, or Nekul), reigns. (610-595, Lepsius; 610, Rawlinson.)

He pays tribute to Assyria, fails in his attempt to reopen the canal of Seti I. between the Red Sea and the Nile; he sends a fleet manned by Phœnician seamen by way of the western coast and the Cape of Good Hope around the continent of Africa.

596 * * * B. C. Nefer-ab-Ra, also called Psammetichus II., [reigns five and a half years]. (594, Rawlinson.)

591 * * * B. C. Haa-ab-Ra, also called Uah-ab-Ra (Apries, or Hophra), reigns. (588, Rawlinson.)

He is the Pharaoh Hophra of the Bible; he has war with Babylon. Zedekiah, King of Judah, enters an alliance with Hophra, then revolts against Babylon, and the Jewish captivity follows.

572± * * * B. C. Khem-ab-Ra, also called Amheses-Nit (Amasis II.), reigns 44 years. (569, Rawlinson.)

He is an Egyptian of low origin, whom the army elects after overthrowing Apries; he legitimates his claim by marrying the granddaughter of Psammetichus I.; Egypt flourishes, yet continues the tribute to Babylon; immigration is encouraged, especially that of the Greeks.

538 * * * B. C. The fall of Babylon brings independence to Egypt.

528 * * * B. C. Ankh-ka-en-Ra, also called Psamthek (Psammetichus III.), reigns six months, as successor to his father. (525, Rawlinson.)

He is conquered by Cambyes, King of Persia.

PERSIAN RULE.

XXVII. Dynasty: Persian.

527 * * * B. C. Cambyes defeats the Egyptians at the battle of Pelusium, and Egypt becomes a Persian province. (525, Rawlinson.)

Kambathet the Persian reigns.

(He murders the last of the Pharaohs, and rules with severity; five years of prosperity are followed by military reverses; disaster enrages the King, and he pillages the temples and the tombs of the kings.)

486 * * * B. C. Khashafarsha (Xerxes the Great) reigns; the Egyptians revolt, but are soon subdued.

465 * * * B. C. Artakhshashas (Artaxerxes) reigns; the Egyptians, led by Amyrteus and Inarus, maintain a revolt against the Persians for six years.

421 * * * B. C. Ra-meri-Amen, also called Antheriurtia (Darius Xerxes, Darius Hystaspes), reigns.

XXVIII. Dynasty: Established at Sais in the Delta.

* * * B. C. Independence of Persia is obtained by Amyrteus, aided by the Greeks. Native rulers hold authority.

* * * B. C. Amen-rnt (Amyrteus) reigns. (460, Rawlinson.)

XXIX. Dynasty: Established at Mendes in the Delta.

399 * * * B. C. Niafaaurut reigns.

393 * * * B. C. Khem-Maat-Ra, also called Haker (Hakor, Achoris), reigns. (389, Rawlinson.)

380 * * * B. C. User-Ra-sotep-en-Ptah, also called Psamut (Psammutichus), reigns.

XXX. Dynasty: Established at Sebenhytus in the Delta.

378 * * * B. C. Snet'em-ab-Ra-sotep-en-Amen, also called Nekht-Hor-hebt-meri-Amen (Nectaneho I.), reigns. (Rawlinson, 384.)

He is called to the throne to repel a threatened invasion from Persia.

* * * B. C. Kheper-ka-Ra, also called Nekht-neb-f (Nectaneho II.), reigns.

351 * * * B. C. Artaxerxes III. (Ochus) comes to the throne after defeating and deposing Nectaneho II.

340 (?) * * * B. C. The ancient Empire falls easily before the Persians under King Artaxerxes III. (Ochus).

* * * B. C. The Egyptians welcome Alexander the Great as a deliverer from the Persian yoke, [and Egypt becomes Greek].

XXXI. Dynasty: Persian. Egypt is again for a short time a province of Persia.

GRECIAN RULE.

332 * * * B. C. XXXII. Dynasty: Macedonian.

Alexander the Great overthrows the Persian rule, and subjects Egypt to his authority. Alexandria is founded as his capital; its walls are six miles in circuit.

323 * * * B. C. XXXIII. Dynasty: Ptolemaic.

Ptolemy I., son of Lagus, also called Soter, one of Alexander's generals, receives Egypt in the division of the Macedonian empire [and rules for 38 years with ability and wisdom].

306 * * * B. C. Ptolemy assumes the title of king.

301± * * * B. C. Ptolemy loses Cyprus by his defeat in the battle of Ipsus.

MISCELLANEOUS.

998 * * King Robert II. is excommunicated by the Pope, and his kingdom put under an interdict. (See Society.)

999 * * Rome. John XVII. is pope; later Sylvester II.

[1003, John XVIII., later John XIX.; 1009, Sergius IV.; 1012, Benedict VIII.; 1024, John XX.]

1000 * * Public excitement is caused by the expectation of the second coming of Christ.

LETTERS.

800± * * Charlemagne patronizes learning.

He gathers learned men at his palace from many countries; he tries to learn to write in his old age; attendants read to him while at his meals. Learning has a temporary revival.

804 * * Schools are established at Tours by Alcuin.

* * Eginhard, the historian, is secretary of Charlemagne.

829± * * Turpin, archbishop of Reims, writes De Vita Caroli Magni at Rolandi, Life of Charlemagne, and Roland.

842 * * The record of the oaths between Charles the Bald and Louis the German are written in French.

843 * * -877 * * John Scotus Erigena writes De Divina Predestinatione, Commentary on Marcianus Capelle, Translation of Dionysius the Areopagit, De Divisione Nature, etc.

9th Century. The poem on Bathius and a Commentary on the prophet Jonah appear.

10th or 11th Century. The poems Passion and The Life of St. Lezer appear in the Provençal language.

1000 * * -50 * * The date of a fragment of 257 decasyllabic verse is written by Raynouard in his Choix de poésies originales des Troubadours. It is the oldest literary monument of the Provençal language.

* * -1300 * * Period of the Troubadours; the Provençals, or minstrels of the south of France.

They are the first European authors to employ their native tongue for composition; their poetry consists of chanzons, or poems of love and gallantry, and sirventes, or lays of chivalry and war.

SOCIETY.

819 * * Louis I. marries Judith of Bavaria, who gains unbounded ascendancy over her feeble-minded husband.

886 * * Louis V., the last of the Carolingians, is poisoned by his queen (or by his mother).

890± * * Jouists, or Tournaments, become frequent.

995 * * Robert the Pious turns from his wife, and marries Bertha, his cousin, daughter of Conrad, King of Arles and Burgundy; she is the mother of six children.

[998. The Pope commands him to separate from Bertha, because of their temporal and spiritual affinity. But Robert holds out seven years against the miseries of the Pope's interdict.]

1000± * * The commons of France are oppressed.

With their wives and children they are mere "chattels" of their master, and can acquire no property, contract no marriage, make no bequest, or inherit any possession without their lord's consent.

1005± * * The king marries Constance, daughter of the Comte de Toulouse and Quercy.

1016 * * Excitement and indignation widely prevail over the destruction of the Holy Sepulcher at Jerusalem by Hakim, Calif of Egypt.

Many Jews are put to death with great cruelty; they are everywhere persecuted, as the alleged inciters to the destruction of the Holy Sepulcher.

STATE.

800 * * The Empire of Charlemagne. Dec. 29. Rome. Charlemagne is crowned by Leo III. as Emperor of the West, using the words "coronato a Deo," "crowned by God." [He regards himself as the rightful successor of the Roman emperors.]

± * * Charlemagne introduces couriers, or mail-posts.

814 Jan. 28. Charlemagne dies, leaving the empire to his sons.

Charles becomes regent of France and Germany; Pépin, regent of Italy; Louis, governor of Aquitaine, Gascony, and the Spanish Marches. All are weak and worthless rulers.

814-840 Louis I. (Débonnaire), the Amiable, is Emperor of the Holy Roman Empire.

817 * * Louis establishes an order of succession.

Lothair, his eldest son, is to inherit the imperial title, with Austrasia and the greater part of Germany; Pépin and Louis, the younger sons, will receive the remainder of the empire.

818 * * Bernhard, King of Italy, nephew of Charlemagne, revolts. [He is subdued and killed.]

822 * * Louis I. submits to canonical penance for the crime of murdering his nephew Bernhard. [He loses the respect of his people; confusion, disgrace, and misery mark his reign.]

829 * * Louis makes a new division of the realm to provide for Charles, a son by Judith, his second wife.

[His other sons revolt, and consign Judith and Louis I. (830) to a cloister; he is soon restored; Louis is permitted to remain nominal ruler, while his son Clotaire fields the power.]

833 June 24. Louis I. is again dethroned.

Nov. 11. Louis I. is condemned by the bishop to perpetual penance for his crimes.

834 Mar. * Louis I. is again restored by the efforts of his sons, Pépin and Louis of Germany.

835 * * Louis I., solicited by his wife, again divides the empire.

837 * * A redivision of the empire is made. [838. Dec. * Rescinded.]

839 * * Louis I. again divides the empire between his sons Lothaire, Louis, and Charles; Charles receives all of France lying west of the Rhone, and Louis the German rebels.

840 June 20. Louis I. dies.

840-987 Carolingian kings of the Franks.

840-877 Charles I., the Bald, reigns. Charles the Bald, son of Louis le Débonnaire, becomes King of France, and as Charles II., Emperor of the Romans.

Aug. * The Treaty of Verdun is concluded between the three sons. (843.)

It divides the empire among them; Charles gets the territory west of the Rhone—the West Frankish lands [and the beginning of modern France]; Louis the German gets the East Frankish lands—the region between the Rhine and the Elbe [the beginning of modern Germany]; Lothaire receives the title of emperor, with Italy and the territory between the Rhine and Rhone—the center Frankish lands. Aquitaine (Central France), Septimania (South France, on the coast), and Brittany (Northwest France), defy and resist the authority of Charles the Bald.

* * The Northmen invade and ravage France; they pillage Paris.

845 * * Paris. Charles II. pays the Northmen 7,000 pounds of silver to retire from France.

848 * * Brittany becomes an independent kingdom.

866 * * Charles II. again buys off the Northmen.

He pays them 4,000 pounds of silver and compensation for every Norman killed by the Franks.

870 Aug. 9. By the Treaty of Meersen, Charles II. and Louis the German divide between them Lotharingia [Lorraine], the dominion of their deceased nephew.

875 Dec. 25. Rome. Charles II. is crowned Emperor of the Romans.

876 Aug. 25. Louis II., the German, dies.

877 Oct. 6. Charles dies, leaving the empire to his son, Louis II.

877-879 Louis the Stammerer reigns.

Louis becomes King of France, and Emperor of Italy. [879. Apr. 10. He dies. He is succeeded by two sons of Louis the German.]

879-882 Louis III. reigns in the North.

* * 884 * * Carloman II. reigns in Aquitaine.

* * 933 * * Vienne is again the capital of Burgundy. Boso, its duke, revolts.

882 Aug. * Louis III. dies; Carloman II. is sole emperor.

884 Dec. * Carloman II. dies of injuries received from a wild bear.

884-887 Charles II., the Fat, reigns.

884 * * Charles the Fat, son of Louis the German, becomes king or regent of France during the minority of Charles the Simple.

[Through his imbecility the kingdom goes to pieces, forming France, Italy, and Germany, and the lesser States of Lorraine, Burgundy, and Navarre.]

886 Sept. * Charles II. concludes a humiliating treaty with the Northmen.

887 * * Paris. Charles II. is deposed by his subjects, led by Arnulf.

They are indignant because of the payment of 800 pounds of silver to the Northmen who retire from Paris. [888. Jan. 13. He dies.]

888-898 Eudes reigns.

* * Eudes, or Odo, Count and defender of Paris, is elected king by the nobles, in opposition to Charles the Simple, son of Charles the Fat.

893-923 Charles III., the Simple.

Charles the Simple is elected king by his partisans in opposition to Eudes.

898 * * Charles III., the Simple, son of Charles the Fat, becomes sole king of France by the death of Eudes.

[911. He purchases peace from the invading Northmen, and cedes part of Neustria [Normandy] to Rollo, their chief. It becomes one of the most prosperous and best-regulated provinces of France; Rouen is the capital.]

920 * * Robert, Duke of France, brother of Eudes, revolts against Charles.

922 June 29. Robert is proclaimed king.

[923. Robert is killed at the battle of Soissons.]

923 July * * Rudolf, son-in-law of Robert, Duke of France, is elected king.

[936. Jan. * He dies without issue.]

929 Oct. 7. Charles III. dies in captivity at the castle of Péronne.

936-954 Louis IV., from beyond the seas (England).

Louis, son of Charles III., reigns. Hugh the Great, Count of Paris, is the real ruler.

942± * * France is ruled by many powerful barons.

They assume the authority of sovereigns in their respective domains, while the royal authority is often limited to the city in which the court resides.

950 * * Civil strife prevails.

Hugh the Great, son of Robert, Duke of France, revolts and afterwards makes peace with the king.]

954 * * Louis IV. dies.

954-986 Lothair reigns. He is son of Louis IV.

956 June 16. Hugh the Great, a nobleman more powerful than the king, dies; he is succeeded by his son Hugh, surnamed Capet.

960 * * Dunkirk is founded by Baldwin, Count of Flanders.

980 * * Lothair renounces his claim to Lorraine, contrary to the advice of Hugh Capet.

986 Mar. 2. Lothair dies.

986-987 Louis V. reigns.

986 Mar. 2. Louis V., "Le Fainéant" (the do-nothing), son of Lothair, becomes king. [He reigns one year, and is the last of the Carolingian dynasty. 987. May * He dies.]

987-1328 The Capetian Dynasty.

987 July 1-996 * * Hugh Capet reigns.

He is elected by the nobles and clergy, to the exclusion of Charles of Lorraine, uncle of Louis V. Each of the great dukes and the counts surpass the king in military power and extent of dominions. [He becomes the founder of the Capetian dynasty. 996. Oct. 24. He dies.]

988 * * Paris again becomes the capital of all France.

986-1031 Robert the Pious, son of Hugh, reigns; the royal power is a mere shadow.

997 * * The oppressed peasants in Normandy revolt against the nobles.

1000± * * The king is almost destitute of power; the feudal system grows stronger, and the influence of the monarchy weaker.

ARMY — NAVY.

- 1032 * * Henry I., aided by Robert, Duke of Normandy, defeats his brother Robert, whose claims to the throne are supported by Constance, his mother.
- 1047 * * William, Duke of Normandy, defeats Guido of Macon at Val de Dumes.
- 1058 * * Henry I. and Count Geoffrey of Anjou, invading Normandy, are defeated at Varville by Duke William [the Conqueror, of England].

CHURCH.

1022 * * The persecution of the Albigenses begins.

* * The heretics of Orleans suffer.
A church council held at Orleans, to extirpate heresy; two priests and eleven others are condemned and burned. The first to suffer death for religion since the days of heathen supremacy.]

1027 * * A synod at Roussillon decrees that enemies at war should not make an attack between Saturday evening and Monday morning.

1033 * * Rome. Benedict IX. is pope. [1044, Gregory VI.; 1046, Clement II.; 1048, Damasus II.; 1049, St. Leo IX.; 1059, Victor II.; 1057, Stephen X.; 1058, Benedict X.; 1059, Nicolas II.]

1035 * * "The Peace of God" is established by council and is very popular, but practically inoperative for the lack of a power to enforce its provisions.

* * Robert the Norman makes a pilgrimage to the Holy Sepulcher.

1041± * * "The Truce of God" is introduced by the Church to take the place of "The Peace of God."

It provides that private feuds shall cease on the more important church festivals and fasts; that there shall be no attack upon an enemy between Wednesday evening and Monday, during every week, leaving but 80 days for war during the year. Laborers in the fields are to be undisturbed.

1060 * * [St.] Anselm assumes the monastic habit at Bec, near Brionne.

[1063. He becomes prior of Bec, 1078. Its abbot, 1093. Archbishop of Canterbury, Eng.]

1061 * * Rome. Alexander II. is pope. [1073, St. Gregory VII.; 1087, Victor III.; 1088, Urban II.; 1099, Paschal II.]

1066 * * The edifice Abbaye aux Dames, or Trinity, at Caen, is founded by Queen Matilda.

11th Century. The cathedral of Périgueux is erected.

1070± * * Philip I. provides revenue to indulge in gross licentiousness.

He sells his bishoprics and other ecclesiastical preferments to the highest bidder. [1073. The Pope remonstrates and threatens. 1094. He excommunicates Philip I. and Bertrada, and puts the realm under the ban. 1095. Again anathematized, and interdict is laid on all places where they may sojourn.]

1076± * * Stephen Auvergne establishes in Limousin the Grandmontines, a monastic order.

1077 * * The edifice Abbaye aux Hommes, or St. Etienne, at Caen, is founded by William the Conqueror.

1080 * * All Jews are banished.

It is alleged against them that in the celebration of the Passover at Paris, they sacrificed a youth, the son of a rich merchant, for which the criminals are executed.

1092 * * A church council is held at Soissons.

1095 * * A church council is convened by Pope Urban II. at Clermont.

Present: four archbishops, 225 bishops, and an immense number of the lower clergy. It proclaims the First Crusade, forbids the investiture of the bishops by laymen; opposes clergymen assuming feudal obligations to laymen, and excommunicates Philip I. for repudiating his wife Bertha, and marrying Bertrada, the wife of Fulk, Count of Anjou.

* * Peter the Hermit preaches the First Crusade.

1096 * * Peter the Hermit, and Walter the Penniles, a French knight, secure the support of the nobility.

Godfrey de Bouillon, Hugh of Vermandois, Robert of Normandy, Robert of Flanders, Stephen of Chartres, Raymond of Toulouse, with Bohemond, son of Robert Guiscard, and Tancred, son of Otto the Good, lead 600,000 infantry and 100,000 cavalry toward the East in the First Crusade. [1099. July 15. Jerusalem is taken by assault.]

1098± * * Robert, a Benedictine abbot of Molesme, establishes the Cistercian Order of monks.

Their name comes from Cîteaux, the site of the first convent in France. The monks observe silence, abstain from eating flesh, sleep on straw, and wear neither shoes nor shirts.

1104 * * Philip undergoes public penance for his sins, yet retains Bertrada as queen-consort. [1108. He assumes the habit of a Benedictine monk.]

1108 -1116 * * The prelates assist the king in suppressing the brigandage of the barons.

1115 * * [St.] Bernard founds the monastery of Clairvaux.

1118 * * Rome. Gelasius II. is pope. [1119, Calixtus II.; 1124, Honorius II.; 1130, Innocent II.; 1143, Celestine II.; 1144, Lucius II.; 1145, Eugenius II.]

1120± * * Pierre Abélard a theologian of Breton, teaches doctrines savoring of heresy, and is opposed for many years by St. Bernard. [1121 Abélard is cited before a council at Soissons and there

SOCIETY.

1348 * * The people are smitten with the Plague of Florence, or the Black Vomit.

It destroys one-fourth of the people of France; the ignorant people accuse the Jews of poisoning the waters, and destroy thousands of them.

1350: * * Much courtesy is shown to men of gentle blood, and scarcely any to those without it.

1358: * * Guillaume Caillet assumes the name Jacques Bonhomme.

He leads bands of peasants, who revolt against their oppressors, and ravage the country during the imprisonment of King John; they are suppressed with much bloodshed. Few peasants venture to sleep in their cabins for fear of robbers, but such as can do so sleep in boats anchored in the water.

1361 * * 62 * * Paris. An appalling mortality is caused by the Black Pestilence. [1367-69. A frightful mortality prevails.]

1364 * * Wretchedness abounds.

The country is laid waste by fire and sword of contending barons, wandering outlaws, and insurgents. Fields are milled, houses in ruins, and Paris itself is forlorn and desolate.

* Paris Only a few of the main streets are paved, and the by-streets are filled with ordure and filth.

1380 * * Manners are rude.

Gentlewomen scamper in the streets, turn and stare at passers-by, peep into windows of private houses, and giggle at mass. Ladies are told to wipe their lips, not their noses, on the table-cloths, and never to steele or tell wilful falsehoods.

1381 * * Paris. Riots break out.

The soldiers demand their pay, and the citizens rise against illegal taxes and for restored liberties.

SOCIETY.

1382 * * Paris. The insurrection of the Mallotins against taxes on bread and produce occurs.

± * * The Scotch archers are formed into the king's bodyguard, because he dare not trust his life to the care of Frenchmen.

1407 Nov. 23. Louis Valois, Duke of Orleans, is assassinated by the king's brother, the Duke of Burgundy.

[1410. Nov. 23. An illusory treaty of peace is made between the two parties after the army of the Armagnacs had razaged the country up to the gates of Paris without a battle.]

1412 * * Paris. Cabochiens, or rufians, led by Simonet Caboche, a butcher, from the dregs of the population, reform (?) the government.

1416 * * Queen Isabella is exiled to Tours.

Because of her disgraceful vices she and her paramour are enclosed in a leathern sack, and cast into the river.

1418 June 12. Paris. The massacre of the Armagnacs begins by direction of John, Duke of Burgundy [3500 persons are killed in three days].

1420 * * Phillip the Good of Burgundy institutes the military Order of the Golden Fleece.

1430 ± * * Gipsies, or Bohemians, a class of public vagrants, appear.

* * Misery prevails in city and in country; poverty, neglect, and despair abound; tillage is neglected, and buildings are unrepared.

* * Fendatories commit the wildest excesses; 800 nobles in Auvergne live in habitual incest, rapine, and violence.

1431 Feb. + * Trial of Joan of Arc.

[Revelations are drawn from her by a priest, under the seal of the confessional, and taken down by concealed notaries; these are used by the prosecution.]

(FEB. 21.) Joan's trial commences at Rouen, before Cauchon and the vicar of the Inquisitor-General of France, with 50 doctors as assessors, and the Maid is without an advocate.

(APR. 18.) The revelations of Joan are pronounced to have come from the Evil One; she is found guilty of blasphemy, imposture, indecency, and of schismatical opinions upon the unity and authority of the church.

(* *) Joan is overcome by threats of death by fire, and signs a confession of deliberate deception, and is condemned to the penance of perpetual imprisonment, with bread and water diet.

(* *) Alleged scandalous means are used to induce Joan to retract her abjuration.

(* *) Joan resumes her male attire, and communicates fresh visions.

(MAY 30.) After being condemned as a witch, Joan is burned at the stake at Rouen, as a relapsed penitent, but with her last breath declaring the voices had not deceived her.

* * Thomas Conecte, a popular preacher, employs boys to run after ladies, and upset the absurd horns worn on their heads, against which he preaches.

1436 Summer. Paris. Brigandage and disorders are created by "Les Écorcheurs" (Flayers).

They desolate France and Belgium, stripping their victims to their shirts, and flaying the cattle.

1437 July 3. The nobility attend the sacred play called The Passion, in the Park of Vexmeil.

1438 * * Paris. The Festival of Fools ceases to be celebrated.

* * A famine occurs; bread is made from fern-roots. [1453. Another famine occurs.]

1440 ± * * The "Praguerie," companies of disorderly soldiers, appear, and foment rebellion.

STATE.

1382 * * Paris. The populace revolt against a bread tax; with mailloins (iron mallets) they kill the tax-gatherers; hence they are called malleters.

The malleters, though promised amnesty and repeal of the tax, are cruelly punished without trial; some are sewn in sacks, and thrown into the Seine.

1384 * * The king's uncles confiscate the wealth of the great cities, Rouen, Reims, Châlons, Troyes, Seris, and Orléans, but squander it on themselves, leaving the treasury empty.

* * Douai is transferred from Flanders to Burgundy. [1388. Nice is annexed to Savoy.]

Sept. 20. Louis of Anjou dies in Italy [and Philip of Burgundy becomes regent].

1385 July 17. Charles VI. marries Isabella, daughter of the Duke of Bavaria.

1388 Oct. * Charles assumes the government.

1408 Mar. * The Duke of Burgundy, having brought an army to Paris, acquires almost supreme authority in the government.

Nov. * Paris. Fearing to see the king in the power of the Duke of Burgundy, the queen and princes persuade him to depart; the royal family retreat to Tours.

1409 Mar. 9. An illusory treaty of peace is concluded at Chartres between the royal family and the Burgundians; the king grants the duke a full pardon for the murder of the Duke of Orleans.

1410 * * Charles of Orleans, son of the murdered duke, marries the daughter of the powerful Count Bernard d'Armagnac, who becomes head of the Orleans party against the Burgundians.

* * -15 * * Civil war prevails between the Burgundians and the Armagnacs.

The Armagnacs are favored by the royal family and the nobility; the Burgundians are favored by the populace of Paris, their principal allies being the butchers.

1412 ± * * Paris. The Cabochiens, allies of the Duke of Burgundy, led by the butcher, Simonet Caboché, commit atrocities, plundering and murdering all who oppose them.

1413 * * Paris. The Armagnacs, led by the dauphin, gain supremacy, and put an end to the rule of the Cabochiens.

1414 Aug. * Henry V. of England demands Normandy, Anjou, and Maine, and Charles VI.'s daughter Catherine in marriage, with a dowry of 2,000,000 crowns. [War follows a refusal.]

1415 Dec. * The Dauphin Louis dies; his brother John, Duke of Touraine, becomes dauphin.

1416 * * The Dauphin John dies; the king's youngest son, Charles, 14 years of age, becomes dauphin.

1417 * * Queen Isabella is banished to Tours on a charge of secret communication with the Duke of Burgundy, and for other offenses. [Nov. 1. She is rescued by the Duke of Burgundy, and escapes with the duke to Chartres. Nov. 12. She announces herself regent.]

1418 May * Paris. The Burgundians again become masters, one of the gates of the city being treacherously opened to an army of their partizans.

June 10-13. Paris. The Armagnacs are brutally massacred by the Burgundians; 3,000 persons are killed.

1419 Sept. 10. John the Fearless, Duke of Burgundy, while in conference with the dauphin on the bridge of Montreuil, is assassinated by Tannequy Duchâtel and other Orleansists, of the dauphin's attendants.

1420 May 21. The Treaty of Troyes is signed after being approved by the insane king, at the prompting of the Burgundian enemies of the dauphin.

It gives the Princess Catherine in marriage to Henry V.; also the crown and kingdom of France to Henry and his heirs, after the death of Charles VI.; it makes Henry regent during the life of Charles.

June 2. Henry V. of England is married to the Princess Catherine.

1422 Aug. 31. Henry V. dies at Vincennes.

Oct. 21. Charles VI. dies.

Oct. 29. Paris. Henry VI., infant son of Henry V. of England, is recognized by the parliament of Paris as King of France and England; the Duke of Bedford is regent.

1422-1461 Charles VII., the victorious.

Oct. 30. Charles, son of Charles VI., assumes the title of king in the castle of Mehun-sur-Yèvre, near Bourges; he is derisively called "King of Bourges."

1429 July 17. Charles VII. is crowned at Reims.

Joan of Arc assists in the ceremony, dressed in full armor, and holding in her hands the sword of state.

1434 * * -51 * * England loses all her possessions in France except Calais.

1435 Aug. * A peace congress is held at Arras.

Sept. 21. The Treaty of Arras, between Charles VII. of France and Philip the Good of Burgundy, is signed.

Philip the Good agrees to recognize Charles as king, on condition of receiving Auxerre, Macon, Péronne, Montdidier, and the towns on the Somme, and exemption from rendering feudal homage.

1436 * * Paris is recovered from the English.

1438 * * Charles VII. publishes the Pragmatic Sanction. (See Church.)

1439 Oct. * The States-General meet in Orleans. Instead of "free companies," it begins a standing army. (See Army.)

1682 * * Louis convokes an assembly of the clergy, which provokes a quarrel with the Pope.

It strongly asserts that the Pope has no right to meddle with the State in matters temporal; that his power must be limited by the ecclesiastical canons; that his decrees are not authoritative or infallible without the assent of a general council; that he cannot ordain anything contrary to the constitutions and liberties of the French church.

1665 Oct. 22. Paris. The Edict of Nantes is revoked by the sole authority of Louis.

The Reformed religion is entirely proscribed (except in Alsace), the churches to be leveled, and the ministers to quit France in 15 days, and private worship prohibited; laymen are forbidden to leave under pain of confiscation of goods and condemnation to the galleys for life; and the children of Protestants to be baptized henceforth by the parish priests, and to be educated in the Roman Catholic religion. [The Deans are sung in Rome, and the Pope sends congratulations to Louis. Terrible suffering and prolonged miseries are caused by enforcing the king's requirements; 50,000 families are driven out of France.]

SOCIETY.

- 1689 * * The Palatinate is devastated. Louis orders it to be burned, as he cannot hold his conquests; cities, towns, farm-buildings, crops, trees, etc., are burned. Europe is exasperated by the brutality.
- 1693 * * The Order of St. Louis is instituted.
- 1700± * * Paris. The court of Louis XIV. is conspicuous. It is the most formal and brilliant of any in the history of France; it abounds in magnificence, luxury, and mistresses. * * * Courtiers show contempt for marriage, abound in licentiousness, have a rage for gambling, and flimsily veil religious hypocrisy with courtly polish and address. * * * Women have remarkable influence in high society. As favorites of the Crown, they rule the state, also the realm of letters and fine arts. Ministers and generals rise and fall to their wishes; members enter the Academy or fail, and books are read or unread at their words. Society was never more decorous or more corrupt. * * * Paris. During the national reverses, vigils, fasts, and penances take the place of revels in court society.

STATE.

- 1686 July 9. The League of Augsburg is formed. It is a confederation of the German States with Holland, Sweden, Spain, and Savoy, to compel France to observe the Treaties of Westphalia and Nimwegen.
- 1688 * * Lower Rhine. The French invade and devastate the Palatinate. Louis claims most of the country for the Duchess of Orleans, sister of the late elector palatine; he also resents the election of a Bavarian prince to the electorate of Cologne, in opposition to his choice.
- 1689 May 2. The Grand Alliance. (See Austria.) [The campaign is principally waged in the Netherlands.]
- 1685± * * France is in a deplorable state because of continuous wars.

1696 June * It. A separate treaty of peace is concluded at Turin between France and Savoy.

Victor Amades, Duke of Savoy, recovers Savoy, Susa, Nice, and Fignerol; he guarantees to France the neutrality of Italy, and his daughter, Mary Adelaide, is to marry the eldest son of the dauphin, Louis's grandson. Savoy promises to remain neutral.

1697 Sept. 20. Neth. The Peace of Ryswick is signed by France, England, Spain, and Holland. [Oct. 30. Also by the Empire and the emperor.]

It confirms the peace made with Savoy; Louis restores all places won by him since the Peace of Nimwegen from England and Holland, also those taken from Spain with the exception of 82 places; he recognizes William III. as King of England and Arne as his successor, and agrees not to aid William's enemies. The chief fortresses in the Spanish Netherlands are to be a barrier between France and Holland by receiving Dutch garrisons; Lorraine is restored to its German duke, and the claims of the princess palatine to the lower Palatinate are commuted for money.

1698 Oct. 11. The First Partition Treaty is signed by England, France, and Holland.

It divides the Spanish realm among three claimants, in view of the expected death without issue of Charles II., the Spanish king, the Electoral Prince of Bavaria, Joseph Ferdinand, grandson of the Empress of Germany, and the Spanish King Charles, to receive the American dependencies and the Spanish Netherlands; the dauphin (nephew of Charles of Spain) to have Naples, Sicily, certain seaports in Tuscany, and the province of Guipuzcoa; the Archduke Charles of Austria, nephew by marriage of Charles of Spain, to have the duchy of Milan.

1700 Mar. 13. The Second Partition Treaty is signed by Louis XIV. and William III.

The Archduke Charles to have Spain and the Indies; the dauphin to have Naples, Sicily, and the duchy of Lorraine; The Duke of Lorraine to have Milan in exchange for the duchy.

Oct. 2. Charles II. of Spain signs a will making Philip of Anjou, son of the Dauphin of France, his heir.

Nov. 16. The Duke of Anjou, grandson of Louis, is proclaimed at Fontainebleau King of Spain as Philip V., the Spanish King Charles having died without issue.

[This causes the war of the Spanish Succession, the proclamation of Philip as King of Spain being a violation of the Partition Treaty of March 13, and the great naval powers, England and Holland, are alarmed at the increased French power by the union of the two crowns.]

1701 Feb. 6. Neth. The barrier towns of the Spanish Netherlands open their gates to the French on an order from the King of Spain; thus the Peace of Ryswick is violated.

Sept. 7. The Second Grand Alliance is formed between William III., the Emperor Leopold I., and the Dutch Republic.

The object is to secure the possessions of Philip V. in the Netherlands and Italy for the Austrian House, to restore the barrier towns to Holland, to secure an indemnity of Austria because of the exclusion of the Archduke Charles from the Spanish throne, and to secure the definite severance of the crowns of France and Spain.

Sept. * Eng. On the death of James II., his son, "the Pretender," is recognized as King of England by Louis.

1711 Aug. 5. Marlborough forces the French lines at Arloux.

* * * Marlborough crosses the fortifications extending from Arras to Bouchain on the Schelde.

Sept. 13. Marlborough captures Bouchain.

[He is now recalled to England through the influence of the Tories.]

1712 July 27. The French under Marshal Villars defeat the allies under Prince Eugène, at Denain; [they recapture Douai, Le Quesnoy, and Bouchain.]

1713 Apr. 11. Peace of Utrecht.

Nov. 7. Switz. The French under Villars take Freiburg.

1714 Mar. 6. Peace. (See State.)

ART - SCIENCE - NATURE.

1708 * * A remarkably severe winter causes the Rhone to freeze over.

* * * Paris. Reign of Louis XIV.

Many works of art are produced, among which is the arch of St. Martin and St. Denis. Great additions are made to the Tuilleries and Louvre.

The gardens of the Tuilleries, like those of Versailles, are laid out by André Le nôtre.

Among the palaces completed are the Place du Carrousel, the Place des Victoires, and the superb Place Vendôme. The quays are also built.

The Champs Élysées are converted into a public promenade. [1823. Dedicate to the city.]

1715 * The French Opéra Comique appears.

1716 * * Paris. Marius submits plans for an instrument with hammer action to the Académie Royale des Sciences.

Philip V. of France is acknowledged King of Spain, but he is not to succeed to the crown of France. Prussia is recognized as a kingdom. Siely is given to the Duke of Savoy, whose possessions are made a kingdom. France abandons its conquests in Holland, gives Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, and Hudson Bay to England, with permission to hold Gibraltar and Minorca, and also to have the contract for supplying African slaves for the Spanish colonies; it also approves the Protestant succession to the British throne. [Germany, refusing to sign the treaty, continues the war.] * * Douai is annexed.

1714 Mar. + * Aust. The Peace of Radstadt is concluded between France and the German Empire.

Naples, Sardinia, Milan, and Netherlands, taken from Spain, are given to Germany; the frontiers of France are preserved, but her pride is humiliated, and her people burdened with debt.

1715 Sept. 1. Louis XIV. dies.

1715-74 Louis XV. reigns.

Louis, the great-grandson of Louis XIV., becomes king. Philip, Duke of Orleans, is made regent; his favorite is Cardinal Dubois, who panders to the king's pleasures.

1716 May * John Law, a Scotchman, projects the Mississippi Scheme.

Its proposed object is to develop the resources of the regions along the Mississippi, believed to abound in the precious metals, and by the profits of the enterprise to pay off the national debt.

* * With permission of the regent, John Law opens a bank for the issue of paper money; the national finances are in a deplorable condition.

1717 Jan. 4. A triple alliance is formed between England, France, and Holland, to check the ambition of Spain. [The King of Spain claims the regency, as uncle to the King of France.]

Sept. * The Western Louisiana Company obtains its grant. [Illinois is annexed.]

 claims [the last] severe law against the Protestants. It attempts to force them into the Catholic Church.

July 25. The violent persecution of Protestants begins.

1725 * * The "Appellants," led by Cardinal de Noailles, appeal from the Pope's bull "Unigenitus" to a general council, but without success.

1730: * * The bishop of Senez is suspended, and banished from his diocese, for opposing the bull Unigenitus.

* * Paris. Persecution of the Jansenists.
 A struggle occurs between Louis XV. and the parliament concerning the enforcement of a second registration of the papal edict.

* * 44 * * The Protestants enjoy comparative quiet.

1732 Aug. 8. Paris. A royal order forbids the magistrates to receive appeals respecting the matter in dispute.
 [They return a positive refusal, and are exiled from Paris.]

* * Paris. Many miracles are alleged to occur at the cemetery of St. Médard, a Jansenist saint. The archbishop of Paris attributes them to Satan.

Extravagances and excesses are alleged against the "Convulsionnaires" in their nocturnal meetings.

The Government closes the gates of the cemetery of St. Médard against the Jansenists.

SOCIETY.

1719 * * Paris. Avarice, corruption, and licentiousness abound. John Law's
 "Mississippi Scheme," for the colonization of Louisiana, becomes popular as a short cut to wealth. [Thousands of families are involved in financial ruin.]

1720 * * Paris. John Law, routed and imperiled, is driven out of France.

STATE.

1718 * * The conspiracy of the Prince of Cellanare, the Spanish ambassador, the Duchess of Maine, and others, to depose the regent, Orleans, is discovered, and the conspirators are punished.

* * Law's bank is made the Royal Bank of France, with exclusive authority to coin money, the privileges of the old East India Company, the trade of Louisiana and the Mississippi, the tobacco monopoly, and the right of receiving all taxes and government imposts.

It issues notes to the extent of 3,000, 000,000 francs, based on the land of the kingdom; its shares rise to twenty-fold the original value — more than 80 times the amount of the specie of France.

 Soissons a (temporary) arrangement is made of points in dispute between Austria and Spain, France and England.

1729 Nov. 9. Sp. A treaty of peace is signed by France, Great Britain, and Spain at Seville, to end the war between England and Spain. England retains Gibraltar, and the three powers unite in close alliance. (See Great Britain.)

1733 * * 35 * * The war of the Polish succession follows the death of Augustus II.

It is caused by rival claimants for the throne; a majority of the nobles elect Stanislaus Leszcynski, the father-in-law of Louis
 XV. of France, whose influence is exerted in the election; a minority, under the influence of Russia and Austria, elect Augustus III., Elector of Saxony, and provide an armed force to sustain the election against France, Spain, and Sardinia.

Oct. 19. A treaty of alliance is formed between France, Spain, and Sardinia.

1735 Oct. 3. Preliminaries of peace are signed at Vienna between France and Austria.

It ends the war of the Polish succession; Stanislaus I. abandons his claim on Poland, and receives the duchies of Lorraine and Bar, which after his decease fall to France.

1736 * * Corsica. Revolutionists overthrow the authority of Genoa, and establish a kingdom, with Theodore Neu-hoef as king. [He soon goes to England for aid, and dies there.]

MISCELLANEOUS.

1720 * * The gold-fields on the banks of the Mississippi are found to be a myth, and every shareholder is anxious to sell.
 [Shares worth £160,000 a year ago are now sold for a sovereign.]

* * 26 * * More than 80,000 victims to the plague fall at Marseilles; the disease was brought from Syria in a vessel.

1734 June 24. The Anzin coal-mines, near Valenciennes, North France, are first opened.

July 14. Paris. The Fête of the Federation is celebrated on the anniversary of the taking of the Bastille.

* Paris has several prominent clubs; the Regency club [the oldest in Paris] is established.

The Jacobins, who rapidly increase and dominate the State, led by Robespierre; Cordeliers, led by Danton, Marat, Camille Desmoulins; Feuillants, moderate monarchists, who had withdrawn from the Jacobins, led by Lafayette and Bailly.

STATE.

1784 Oct. 30. Charles Alexandre de Calonne becomes comptroller of finance. [He is extravagant, and contracts enormous debts.]

1785 * Public indignation is [unjustly] excited against Queen Marie Antoinette by the diamond necklace transaction; the court is discredited.

The Comtesse De La Motte persuades Cardinal de Rohan to negotiate the purchase in the queen's name of a necklace for $2,500,000, which the Comtesse receives and applies to her benefit; a trial follows the jeweler's demand on Marie Antoinette for payment, and results in the condemnation and punishment of De La Motte, the banishment of the cardinal, and much scandal in connection with the queen.

1787 Jan. 29. An Assembly of Notables, called by the king, meets at Versailles. [It rejects Calonne's proposal to tax ecclesiastical property.]

* Calonne is dismissed, and Archbishop of Brienne is appointed minister of finance.

* Paris. The Assembly of Notables sanctions a land and stamp tax, but the parliament of Paris refuses to register the edict embodying them.

* The Parliament of Paris is summoned to Versailles, and the king in a bed of justice registers the tax edict on his own authority; the parliament protests, and is banished to Troyes.

May 25. The Assembly of Notables is dismissed.

* Brienne makes a compromise with the parliament, the tax edict being withdrawn, and a progressive loan substituted.

Sept. 20. Paris. The parliament is recalled and assembles; several members, including the Duke of Orleans, objecting to the loan, it is registered by royal authority.

* The Duke of Orleans is banished, and two other members of the parliament are imprisoned for resistance to the king's edict.

1788 Jan. 4. Paris. The parliament passes a decree annulling arbitrary arrests, and recalling its exiled members.

* The Ministry and parliament compromise; the parliament returns to Paris.

It provides one chamber having legislative power, sole right of initiation of laws, declaring war and making peace, and signing treaties.

Feb. 4. Paris. Louis XVI. takes the oath to maintain the new Constitution.

Feb. 13. Paris. The Convention abolishes monastic establishments, and confiscates their lands.

Mar. * Ecclesiastical property is confiscated to the State.

Assignats, notes of the Government secured by the confiscated public lands, are issued; the clergy are to be supported by the State.

July 14. Paris. National Federation.

The king takes an oath to support the new Constitution before an immense assembly of 350,000 persons at Champ de Mars.

The old divisions of France are abolished, and the country is divided into 83 departments, named after rivers and mountains; these are divided into 314 districts and cantons, with communes remaining as before.

Each department is to have a local assembly; nobility titles and ecclesiastical orders are abolished, except such orders as are educational or humanitarian; pastors are to be chosen by the voters of the districts, and the bishops by those of the departments. [Two-thirds of the ecclesiastics decline to accept the Constitution by taking the required oath.]

* The rights of primogeniture are abolished.

Sept. * Necker, having lost his influence, retires to Switzerland.

Aug. 23. Bonaparte returns from Egypt.

* * Paris. Bonaparte offers his services to the new Directory.

Nov. 9. Paris. The legislative body called the Ancients is persuaded to remove to St. Cloud, as a place of greater freedom.

A bloodless revolution occurs: downfall of the Republic.

The Coup d'État of the 18th Brumaire. Bonaparte dissolves the Council of the Ancients as incompetent.

Nov. 10. Paris. Bonaparte expels the Council of Five Hundred by the aid of the army, and assumes control of the Government.

1799 * * -1804 * * Government of the Consulate.

Bonaparte is chosen First Consul for ten years; he selects Jean Jacques Régis de Cambacérès and Charles François Lebrun for his two consultation colleagues.

Dec. 13. Paris. The new (fourth) Constitution is promulgated. [Ratified; vote, 3,000,000-1,567.]

There are to be three consuls, for terms of ten years and reeligible; the first to hold all the power, and the other two for consultation.

Legislation is to be initiated by a Council of State, appointed by the First Consul. Its laws are to be discussed by a Tribunal of One Hundred, who are then to pass them on to be discussed before the Legislative Body (300) by three orators, and then by three Counsellors of State nominated by the Government, and to be finally ratified or rejected by a secret ballot, without debate. A Senate of 80 life-members, to confirm or annul all acts sent to it on constitutional grounds. Senators to name the Consuls, Tribunes, and Legislative Body, choosing them from 5,000 persons who are chosen by universal suffrage. Senators to be elected to vacancies by joint action from a list of three candidates presented by the Legislative Body, the Tribunal, and the First Consul.

Napoléon Bonaparte rapidly increases his popular influence.

fidence in the Ministry. Vote, 221-181. [May 16. The Chamber is dissolved.]

Mar. * Paris. Charles X. declares his purpose to firmly sustain his ministers against the Chamber; "No compromise, no surrender," his motto.

* * A new election for the Chambers is held.

The Liberals gain an increased majority by the election; 202 of the 221 voted against the Ministry are elected.

July * Algiers is conquered with an immense spoil, valued at 48,000,000 francs, and permanently annexed as a province. (See p. 9.)

July 27-29. Paris. The July Revolution, "The Three Days' Revolution," "The Great Week."

The populace rises in fury against the king; Charles X. and his family flee before it. The revolt is caused by the publication of the three (five) ordinances on July 26: (1) declaring the recent elections illegal; (2) changing the electoral system arbitrarily so as to limit the right of suffrage to rich land-owners, who are chiefly Royalists; (3) the prohibition of newspapers and pamphlets not having the permit of the king.

A popular revolt occurs.

Barricades appear in the streets, and fights with the troops occur.

July 28. Paris is declared in a state of siege.

The bourgeoisie, or middle class, join the revolt; and the troops, badly led, become infected, and part of them join in the popular cause. The Hôtel de Ville is captured, every house becomes a fortress, and the victory is complete.

July 29. Paris. The Louvre is taken, and the troops retire.

The Tuilleries is sacked, and wild excesses abound.

When too late, Charles dismisses his ministers, revokes the obnoxious ordinances, and reestablishes the National Guard.

A provisional government is formed. Gen. Lafayette is placed in command of the National Guard, and Louis Thiers and François Mignet urge the transfer of the crown to the Duc d'Orléans.

July 30. Paris. The Duc d'Orléans, of the younger line of Bourbons, accepts the office of Lieutenant-general of the kingdom, on the invitation of the peers and deputies.

Aug. 2. Charles X. and his son abdicate in favor of the Duc de Bordeaux.

The House of Orleans.

1830-1848 Louis Philippe I. reigns.

Aug. 9. Paris. Louis Philippe, Duc d'Orléans, accepts the tendered crown from the Legislature.

In this act he rejects the doctrine of the "divine right of kings," and acknowledges the people as the source of sovereign power.

Aug. 11-36 * * Paris. The Ministry of Achille C. Broglie, François P. Guizot, and Marquis de Lafayette.

Aug. 17. Charles X. retires to England.

Nov. 2-31 Mar. 13. Paris. Ministry of Jacques Lafitte.

Dec. 21. Paris. Prince Jules A. de Polignac and other ministers are tried for high treason, and sentenced to perpetual imprisonment.

ARMY - NAVY.

1832 Feb. 22. The French troops re-occupy Ancona.

Nov. * Neth. Under a treaty with the English, the French army of 50,000 men under Marshal Gérard besieges the etadde of Antwerp. [Dec. 23. The Dutch capitulate, and surrender the fortress.]

1834 * Algeria. The French incorporate the Turkish cavalry, called Spahis, in the army.

1835 * Algeria. Abd-el-Kader, the religious enthusiast, opposes the French [for 15 years]. (p. 8)

Nov. 23. Algeria. The Arabs under Achmet Bey defeat two assaults, and the French retire.

1838 Nov. 27. Mex. The French bombard St. John of Uloa; after four hours the Mexicans surrender. [Vera Cruz is also bombarded.]

GERMANY is a country of Central Europe. The government is a constitutional monarchy, and the king of Prussia the hereditary emperor. The imperial legislative power is vested in a Parliament of two houses, free from veto, — the Bundesrath, or federal council, of 58 members, and the Reichstag, consisting of 397 members, who are elected for five years by universal suffrage and ballot. It has possessions in New Guinea, Bismarck Archipelago, the Solomon Islands, and the Marshall Islands. It has a protectorate called Cameroons, also Damara-land, on the west coast of Africa, and a section of the Zanzibar coast in East Africa. The language chiefly spoken is German; but Poles, Lithuanians, Wends, Czechs, Danes, French, and Walloons are numerous, and use their own tongues. The predominating religion is Protestant; but about 35 per cent of the population are Roman Catholics, who are numerous in the Southern States. Area, 208,738 square miles; population in 1890, 49,428,470.

CHURCH.

* * * B. C. The ancient Germans believe in the immortality of the soul, and worship or fear gods, demigods, or giants; they have non-professional priests, bards, and sacred groves, and believe in fairies, elves, and dwarfs, and use images in worship.

Woden and his wife Fria, or Friga, Ziu, and Fro are the principal divinities.

Woden, the "All-Father," is the superior divinity, and the god of the air and the sky, the giver of the fruits of the earth, and one who delights in war; and is represented as an imposing figure in a large white mantle, mounted on a white horse.

Donar (Thor) is armed with a hammer and a thunderbolt, and presides over thunder and the weather. Thiu (Tyr) answers to the Roman Mars, the god of war. Fro (Frey) is the god of love; Franna (Freya) is his sister.

Worship consists in the formal repetition of invocations, and the offering of sacrifices.

Particular days [from which we have the modern names for the days of the week] are set apart for the worship of each deity; festivals are held in honor of the gods; sacrifices consist of domestic animals, including horses; human sacrifices, especially prisoners of war, are sometimes offered. The will of the gods is known by the chance of a lot, the neighing of wild horses, and by the movements of birds in their flight.

Lofty trees are esteemed sacred to the gods, and the oak and the red ash are set apart to Donar; trees are decorated with wreaths of flowers and lighted candles.

SOCIETY.

* * * B. C. The ancient Germans have fair hair and blue eyes; they are taller than the Romans, and seem to them as giants; they pay great respect to women and aged people; they honor chastity in women as they do bravery in men; the women are the companions and subjects of their husbands, and work while their husbands are idle, or absent in war or the chase.

* * * B. C. The Germans, with their cattle, live together in rude huts built of wood, are fond of social gatherings, and indulge in the vices of gambling and intoxication.

* * * B. C. The people are divided into three classes, nobles, freemen, and serfs.

* * * B. C. The people are chiefly freemen and land-owners; they carry arms, and own serfs, later consisting chiefly of prisoners taken in war, with their offspring. The nobles are men of higher birth, but without special prerogatives; an intermediate class, called the liti, hold land under some superior.

* * * B. C. Courts are held in the open air; judges, assessors, or jurymen try causes.

* * * B. C. Private injuries are avenged by the person injured or his family.

* * * B. C. "The Germans are, above all, distinguished by a strong sense of personal independence. In their faithfulness, courage, and personal purity they are emphatically contrasted with other barbarous peoples." (Fisher.)

* * * B. C. The land surrounding the villages is held in common, the remainder being chiefly forests.

1160 * * Rome. Pope Alexander III. puts the emperor and all his adherents under the ban. (See Church.)

1163 * * Silesia. Breslau becomes the capital of the duchy.

* * Berlin is founded by the Margrave Albert the Bear, who brings a colony from the Netherlands.

1164 May * It. Padua, Verona, Vicenza, and other cities of the March of Verona, unite in a league for mutual defense [the precursor of the Lombard League].

* * * Fends and devastation afflict Westphalia on the Rhine and Swabia; princes and lords arrayed against each other.

* * Hung. Saxon emigrants found Hermannstadt.

1166 * * A feud arises between Henry the Lion and his enemies, the archbishop of Bremen and of Magdeburg, with Albert the Bear and others.

* * New disturbances arise in Italy.

12th Century. Brunswick. The city is enlarged and fortified by Henry the Lion, and becomes one of the most important cities of Northern Germany.

1167 Apr. 7. It. The League of the Lombard cities is formed.

Cremona, Bergamo, Mantua, and Ferrara, together with the cities of the Venetian March, — Verona, Vicenza, Padua, Treviso, — conclude a defensive alliance against the emperor.

Dec. 1. It. The cities sign another and greater league of all the cities of Northern Italy. [The emperor at Pavia soon proclaims the cities of the Lombard League in outlawry.]

* * It. The Guelphs and Ghibellines unite and rebuild Milan on a handsome scale, and also the city of Alessandria.

1168 * * Bavaria. Diet of Bamberg; peace is made between Henry the Lion and his enemies.

1169 * * The emperor causes his son Henry, five years of age, to be elected and crowned king of Germany.

1176 Nov. * The emperor and the League sign the proclamations of peace.

1177 June 22. Venice. A peace is signed by the emperor, Pope Alexander III., and the Lombard League for six years; and by Frederick and the king of Sicily for 15 years.

1180 Jan. 15. Bavaria. Henry the Lion, falling to appear at four Diets to which he had been summoned, is put under the ban of the empire.

1180-1212 Saxony. Bernard of Ascania is duke; Anhalt and Wittenberg become parts of Saxony.

1180 * * Bavaria is taken from Henry "the Lion" by Frederick, and granted to Otto, Count Wittelsbach, Henry having refused aid in the war in Italy against the Pope.

* * Saxony. Duke Henry is overthrown by Frederick, and the electorate is divided.

1181 Nov. 30. Henry the Lion, of Bavaria, throws himself at the emperor's feet at the Diet of Erfurt.

Frederick refuses to restore the old rights, but permits Henry to hold the allodial estates of Braunschweig [Brunswick] and Lüneburg.

1183 June 25. Baden. A perpetual peace by a diet at Constance is made between the emperor and the Lombard cities.

The emperor renounces his regalian claims on the cities of the League, and consents to the reestablishment of the independence of the republics of Italy, acknowledging their right to levy armies, erect fortifications, and exercise civil and criminal jurisdiction, and also to extend their confederation. The cities are to maintain all just rights of the emperor and to acknowledge his overlordship by the payment of a sum of money, and each is to accept an imperial judge.

* * Bavaria. Louis becomes duke.

1184 * * Hesse. A great imperial festival is held at Mentz in celebration of unity and peace between Germany and Italy.

1184-86 Frederick's peaceful expedition visits Italy.

1186 Jan. 27. It. Frederick's son and heir, Henry, marries Constance, daughter of Roger II., aunt and heiress of William II., the last of the Norman kings of Naples and Sicily.

1189 Nov. * William II., Norman King of the Two Sicilies, dies, and Prince Henry inherits the kingdom.

1190 May * Bavaria. Frederick leaves Ratisbon, and joins the Third Crusade; his son Henry is viceroy in his absence.

1190-97 Henry VI. is King of Germany.

1191 Apr. 15. Rome. Henry VI. receives the imperial crown of Germany, Italy, and the Two Sicilies, after surrendering Tuscanum to the Romans.

He besieges Naples in vain to rescue his inheritance by Constance his wife, from Tancred of Lecce, the usurper, who had been elected king by the natives of Palermo.

1193 Mar. 23. Henry secures the surrender of the captive Richard the Lion-Hearted, by paying Duke Leopold of Austria 50,000 marks. (P. 506.)

July 29. Hesse. Richard the Lion-Hearted signs a treaty at Worms fixing his ransom at 100,000 marks of silver with other conditions. (1194. Feb. * He is liberated.)

* * It. Henry VI. is crowned King of Naples and Sicily at Palermo.

1195 Aug. 6. Brunswick. Henry the Lion dies.

1196 Apr. * Bavaria. The Diet of Würzburg.

Henry fails to secure the approval of his plan to make Germany and the Sicilies a great hereditary monarchy by allowing the great fiefs of the crown to be annexed by inheritance to the crown lands, also to make the monarchy hereditary through either the male or female line. It is opposed by the Saxon princes and the lesser nobility, to whom he vainly offers concessions for the surrender of the right of electing a sovereign.

Dec. * Hesse-Nassau. The princes of the empire at Frankfurt-on-the-Main unanimously elect Frederick's son, Frederick Roger, two years of age, the emperor's successor.

1197 Sept. 28. It. Henry VI. dies at Messina when contemplating grand plans of conquest in the Eastern Empire.

1198-1208 Rival kings.

The princes elect and recognize Philip of Swabia, youngest son of Frederick Barbarossa, as King of Germany.

They ignore the pledges of December, 1196, "made to a child still unbaptized," and elect Philip of Hohenstaufen.

The Welfic, or Guelphic party, of inferior numbers, chiefly from Low Germany, elect Otho IV., son of Henry the Lion, as King of Germany.

1198-1208 Philip of Swabia reigns.

1198-1215 (1218) Otho IV. reigns.

1198-1215 Civil war prevails between the Hohenstaufen party and the Welfs.

The two parties divide the towns and homes of Germany. The former is upheld by the bishops of North Germany and the princes of Bavaria, Austria, etc.; the latter by a very weak faction in Germany, having England and Denmark as allies, and is favored by the Pope.

12th, 13th Centuries. Prussia is largely repopulated by colonies of Germans.

1201 Mar. 1. Rome. Pope Innocent III. acknowledges Otho as the lawful head of the empire, and releases high and low from their allegiance to the Hohenstaufen.

1208 June 21. Bavaria. King Philip is assassinated at Bamberg by the Count Palatine, Otho of Wittelsbach.

Oct. 4. Rome. Otho IV. is crowned emperor by the Pope, after renewing his former concessions to the Holy See, which include the surrender of the estates of Matilda of Tuscany.

* * Cities rise to new importance, and form leagues against the exactions of nobles.

1210 Nov. 18. Otho IV. withholds Tuscany, and is excommunicated by Pope Innocent III. [1212. Deposed.]

1212 * * The Pope puts forward his protégé, Frederick, King of Naples and Sicily, son of Henry VI., as an anti-emperor.

Apr. * It. Frederick II. leaves Sicily to take possession of the crown of Germany.

1212-50 Frederick II., son of Henry VI., is elected King of Germany by the Ghibelline party (Hohenstaufen). [He is the most brilliant of all the German emperors.]

1214 * * The Palatinate falls to Bavaria.

1215 Dec. 9. R. Prus. Frederick II. is crowned King of Germany at Aachen [Aix-la-Chapelle] by Archbishop Siegfried of Mentz.

Nov. 30. Rome. Innocent III., as president of a great council and "lord over kings and peoples," confirms the deposition of the Emperor Otho IV. [1218. May 19. Otho dies at Harzburg, Brunswick.]

1217 * * S. Ger. Frederick II. gives Swabia to his young son Henry.

1218 Apr. 15. Switz. Berne is made a free imperial city.

1219 * * Bavaria. Nuremberg is made a free imperial city.

1220 * * Frederick II. has his son Henry elected King of Rome.

* * Frederick leaves Germany [and is absent for 15 years].

Nov. 22. Rome. Frederick II. is crowned emperor by Honorius III., after pledging himself to support the feudal supremacy of the Holy See over his hereditary lands, which should ever be kept separate from Germany.

1222 * * Rh. Prus. Henry, son of the emperor, is crowned king at Aachen [Aix-la-Chapelle]; Archbishop Engelbert of Cologne is his royal adviser.

1225 Nov. * It. Frederick marries Yolanthe, daughter of John of Brienne, and heiress of Lombardy.

CHURCH.

1378 * * "The Schism of the West."'

England and the empire acknowledge Urban VI. as pope, while France, Spain, and Scotland acknowledge Clement VII. Rival popes reciprocally excommunicate each other (p. 674).

* * * Mysticism awakens in many minds an aspiration which the church, in its corrupt state could not satisfy. Mystics are much opposed, and charged with immorality, pantheism, communism, and maintaining private inspiration.

1386 * Christianity is introduced into Lithuania.

1400 * It. The Council of Pisa.

It deposes Popes Gregory and Benedict, and elects Alexander V.; as neither of the deposed Popes will yield, there are three Popes (p. 506).

1410 * Rome. John XXIII. is pope.

1412 * Bohemia. The Reformation is begun.

John Huss denounces the bull of Pope John XXIII. against King Ladislaus of Naples, and together with Jérôme of Prague opposes the sale of indulgences.

1414-18 Baden. The Council of Constance.

It is a council of the empire, yet having prelatial visitors from Italy, France, England, and Spain, besides numerous princes with their imposing trains. The great Assembly includes Pope John XXIII., five patriarchs, 33 cardinals, 200 archbishops and bishops, and 80,000 laymen.

1418 Projects are made to suppress the Bohemian heresy, heal the papal schism, and reform the church. It proclaims its superiority over the Pope, condemns the doctrines of John Huss, deposes Pope John XXIII., and prevails on Pope Gregory XII. to abdicate, and later deposes Pope Benedict XIII. It is proposed to reform the church, but by the action of Spain, the effort fails; Martin V. is elected pope; the council adjourns without accomplishing any effective reformation of abuses (p. 506).

(MAR. 20.) Pope John XXIII. a fugitive.

In disgust of a stable-boy he flees from Constance when it is proposed that the council investigate his crimes; many prelates and cardinals follow him, but they do not break up the council. [He is captured, imprisoned, and executed.]

(JUNE 15.) Communion in one kind only is authoritatively sanctioned by the council.

(1417. MAR. 16.) The University of Prague demands the communion in both kinds for both clergy and laity.

(1418.) The council suspends all the privileges of the university because of its demand.

(APR. 22.) Pope Martin V. leaves the council.

1420 Mar. 17. Bohemia. Sigismund burns Crusa at the stake, after having dragged him through the streets of Prague.

1421 July * Bohemia. The emperor and the Crusaders against the heretics attack the city of Prague. (See Army.)

1423 * Rh. Prus. A church council is held at Treves.

1429 * Rome. "The Schism of the West" is ended by the resignation of Clement VIII.

1431 * Rome. Eugenius IV. becomes pope. [Felix is anti-pope.]

July 23-49 May 7. Switz. The General Council of Basel is held; Julian is president.

(JULY 22.) It meets to effect the union of the Greek and Roman churches, reconcile the Protestants, and promote the reformation of the church.

(1433 *) The council settles the Bohemian controversy by the Compact of Prague, by which the Hussites are granted the use of the cup in the Eucharist.

(1439. OCT. 29.) Eugenius, refusing to recognize its authority, is deposed. (Oct. 30.) Felix V. is elected (anti-pope). [His decisions are in part recognized by the Gallican Church, but rejected by the Ultramarines.]

1438 * * 39 * * It. The Council of Ferrara-Florence.

It decrees the Seven Sacraments; viz., baptism, confirmation, the eucharist, penance, extreme unction, holy orders, and matrimony. It proclaims the union of the Greek and Roman churches.

* * * The spiritual princes have all the faults of the secular princes, besides special defects of their own.

Simony universally prevails; the scandalous social life of the inferior clergy, with cold and unimpressive services, weakens the hold of the church on the public mind.

1445 * * The emperor attempts to frustrate the efforts made to reform the church, and compels the German bishops to quit their antagonism to Rome; he receives 100 prebends and other considerations from the Pope.

1446 Mar. * Hesse-Nassau. A league is formed at Frankfurt by the Diet.

It proposes general resistance of the attacks of the emperor and pope on the rights of the leaguers, and to compel a recognition of the reforms of the Councils of Constance and Basel. [The league is broken up by bribery.]

* * Vienna. The Concordat of Vienna is concluded with the Pope, who abandons the reforms promised in the Council of Basel.

1447 * * Rome. Nicholas V. is pope.

1448 * * Bavaria. The Concordat of Aschaffenberg is signed by Frederick, thus perpetuating the evils in the church which had been partly reformed.

LETTERS.

CHURCH.

- 1455 * * Hesse. The Bible is first printed. (See Letters.)
- 1455 * * Rome. Calixtus III. is pope. [1488. Pius II.; 1464. Paul II.; 1471. Sixtus IV.; 1484. Innocent VIII.; 1492. Alexander VI. (Borgia), a tyrannical ruler and moral monster. 1503. Pius III. is pope for 26 days; he is succeeded by Julius II., a military pontiff, whom Europe is entombed in war, the church discipline neglected, and the spirit of religion discredited.]
- 1483 Nov. 10. Pr. Saxony. Martin Luther is born at Eisleben.
- [1507. Becomes a priest. 1508. The vicar-general of the Augustinian monks sends Martin Luther from Erfurt to Wittenberg to be a professor of philosophy. 1510. Sent to Rome on the business of his order. Here he ascends Pilate's staircase on his knees with beggars and peasants, pausing to weep and pray when a child in Rome is to cry within him "The just shall live by faith." 1512. He takes the degree of a doctor of divinity.]
- 1485 * * Rh. Prus. The Jews are expelled from Cologne.
- 1502 * * John Diez (Tetzel) begins the selling of absolutions. Tetzel's rates: witchcraft, two ducats; polygamy, six; murder, eight; sacrifice and perjury, nine.
- 1511 * * It. A council is called at Pisa by some of the cardinals, the French king, and the emperor, to restrain the ambitious Pope, and reform religion. [Its labors are fruitless.]
- 1512 * * Rome. A council is called at the Lateran palace, composed chiefly of Italians, which condemns the council of Pisa; Julius dies before the work is completed.
- 1513 * * Rome. Leo X. becomes pope. [He needs much money for artists, scholars, the splendor of his court, for building St. Peter's, and as many allies, for the dowry of his favorite sister; he attempts to obtain money by "a voluntary tax of the Germans," collected by the sale of absolutions.]
- * * * The general state of religion is deplorable; public worship is ceremonious and heartless, sermons are often mere theological quibbles, warnings of purgatory, and expositions of the utility of indulgences.
- * * * Many of the bishops are luxurious and prodigal, and buy and sell sacred offices; priests are indolent, unchaste; monks are numerous and indolent; the Benedictines are wealthy and forgetful of their rules; the mendicants add ignorance to lax observance of rules; the Dominicans are preoccupied by the terrible tribunal of the Inquisition.

CHURCH.

1516 * * Bavaria. Balthazar Hubmeyer, an Anabaptist, preaches to great crowds in the cathedral at Ratisbon.

1517 * * The Reformation begins and rapidly advances.

(1517, OCT. 31.) Pr. Saxony. Martin Luther nails to the church door at Wittenberg his thesis containing 95 propositions.

He condemns as wicked the traffic in indulgences by which John Tetzel, a Dominican friar, the bishop's agent, collected money, and all his accomplices; also the doctrine which lay at the root of the offense.

(* *) Sylvester Prierias, the general of the order of Dominican monks, James Hoogstrat of Cologne, and John Eckins of Ingolstadt furiously assail Luther.

(* *) Luther writes modest letters to the Pope to show the justice of his cause.

(1518 *) Bavaria. Luther, summoned before the Diet of Augsburg, refuses to abjure, but appeals to the Pope.

(OCT. 4.) Bavaria. Luther holds three interviews at Augsburg with Cajetan, the Pope's legate, who requires submission without argument.

(NOV *) Rome. The Pope issues a bull condemning the attacks on indulgences. He asserts that he has the power of delivering sinners from all punishments due to every sort of transgression.

(NOV. 25.) Pr. Saxony. Luther at Wittenberg appeals from the Pope to a council of the whole church.

(1519, JAN *) Karl von Miltitz, the Pope's legate, prevails upon Luther to write a very submissive letter to the Pope.

(MAY. 3.) Luther writes a letter to a council of the Pope. He promises silence if the same be observed by his adversaries.

(* *) Rome. The Pope writes a kind letter to Luther.

(JUNE 26—JULY 16.) Saxony. Luther and his friend, Andrew Bodenstein of Carlstadt, have a public disputation at Leipsic with John Eck at Pleissenburg Castle. The controversy takes a new shape; Luther attacks not only indulgences but the authority of the church and of the Pope.

(* *) Pr. Saxony. Luther continues his preaching, lecturing, and writing, at Wittenberg, gaining many thousands of adherents.

(1520, JUNE 26.) Pr. Saxony. Luther issues an address to the German nobles. He attacks church corruption and the authority of the Pope, and advocates "Germany for the Germans," civil government uncontrolled by ecclesiastics, a married clergy, and a national system of education.

(JULY 15.) Rome. The Pope issues a bull condemning 41 of Luther's tenets. He adjudges his writings to the flames, and commands his submission, with supplication of papal clemency, within 63 days, on peril of being cast out of the church.

(OCT. 6.) Pr. Saxony. Luther issues his work, the Babylonian Captivity of the Church, in which he argues that faith alone is sufficient for salvation.

(OCT. 12.) Rh. Prus. The papal legate, Miltitz, has another interview with Luther, who expresses his willingness to test the questions in dispute by appeal to council.

(OCT. 9.) Saxony. The Pope's bull is published at Leipsic by John Eck, and also posted up in the various German towns [where it is torn down by the students].

(DEC. 10.) At Leipsic Luther publicly burns the Pope's bull, with a copy of the canon law, thus signifying his withdrawal from the Roman Catholic Church.

(OCT. 17.) Saxony. Luther draws up a solemn protest at Leipsic, appealing from the Pope to a council.

STATE.

1529 Mar. 13+. Bavaria. The second Diet of Speyer meets for the settlement of the disturbances of the Empire.

The recent victories of the Emperor Charles V. in Italy and Ferdinand (the King of the Romans) make the Catholic party more aggressive, and decide on a more strict execution of the decree of the Diet of Worms.

(Apr. 19.) The minority in the Diet of Speyer favoring the Reformation—the Elector of Saxony, the princes of Hesse, Lüneberg, Anhalt, Brandenburg, and 14 imperial cities—present a protest. (See Church.)

Aug. 5. Fr. The Peace of Cambrai. (p. 631).

1529-32 War with the Turks.

The Hungarians are divided into two parties, each seeking the vacant kingship, one under Ferdinand, brother of the emperor, and the other under John Zapolya, who is aided by the Turks.

1530 * * It. Charles V. is crowned emperor at Bologna by the Pope; the last of the German emperors crowned by the pontiff.

Aug. 7. Bavaria. Diet of Augsburg.

The Landgrave of Hesse leaves the Diet of Augsburg after the emperor has demanded submission and threatened the Protestants to prepare for defense. [The Catholic party assumes a gentler tone.]

(Sept. 23.) The Protestant princes declare that they cannot conform to the emperor's demand, as it is contrary to their consciences; they leave the city at noon; their representatives remain.

(Oct. 17.) Sixteen free cities have now united in a refusal to pay the "Turkish tax," unless they are assured of a general peace in their own country.

(Nov. 11.) The decision of the Diet is again read to the members; the Protestants object that the emperor has no right to issue orders in matters of faith, and leave the city.

(Nov. 19.) The decision of the Diet against Protestants is proclaimed; the Diet adjourns.

1531 Feb. 27. Hesse-Nassau. Nine Protestant princes and 11 imperial cities enter the League of Schmalkald.

It is a defensive alliance against the emperor for nine years in his attack upon religion. [Later five other princes join, also 10 other imperial cities.]

The Elector of Saxony and the Landgrave of Hesse are appointed its chiefs.

* * The Emperor causes his brother Ferdinand of Austria to be elected King of the Romans, and to be crowned at Aachen [Aix-la-Chapelle]; the Elector of Saxony protests in the name of the Protestants.

1532-47 Saxony. John Frederick "The Magnanimous" is duke.

He is defeated in the Schmalkald war, and captured by the emperor Charles V., who compels him to sign the capitulation of Wittenberg, by which the electorate and various territories are transferred to Maurice, of the Albertine line.

July 23. Bavaria. The religious Peace of Nuremberg is signed.

The Turks and their French allies threatening war, it is deemed prudent to revoke the edict of Augsburg, suspend all processes, and permit freedom of worship to the Protestants, until the meeting of a new council to be held within a year.

1534 * * The Protestants consent to recognize Ferdinand as King of the Romans on condition that he renounces his claim on Wittenberg, which had been given him by the emperor.

* * Wallenstein loses favor with the imperial court, where the Spanish party seeks his overthrow.

* * Treason of Wallenstein.

He negotiates secretly with the Saxons, the Swedes, and the French; he proposes to use the army to secure independent action for himself, and deliver the emperor from the Spanish party, and compel a peace, if necessary, and then reorganize the empire; the court succeeds in detaching his leading generals from his cause. [1634, Jan. 24. The conspiracy is proclaimed, Feb. 18. He is deposed.]

1634 Feb. 24. Bohemia. Wallenstein goes to Eger, expecting to meet Bernhard Saxe-Weimar and Arnim.

Feb. 25. Bohemia. Wallenstein is assassinated.

He is killed by Capt. Devereaux, at the instigation of the Irish Gen. Butler, and with the evident approval of the emperor, but without his command. [The assassins of the great general and his friends are rewarded with riches and honors.]

* * Brunswick. Augustus becomes the Duke of Brunswick-Wolfenbüttel.

1635 May 30. The Peace of Prague ends the war between the emperor and the Elector of Saxony.

(1) The elector receives Lusatia and the archbishopric of Magdeburg; the latter for his son August, only for life.

(2) Confiscated ecclesiastical estates to remain with the possessor, if confiscated before the convention of Passau; if after, it then to be held by the possessor for forty years, and in certain cases forever; those estates held immediately of the emperor excepted.

(3) Amnesty is granted, except to those guilty of disturbances in Bohemia and the Palatinate; Saxony is to aid the emperor against Sweden; the Lutherans (alone) are to have freedom in religion. The peace is accepted by most of the Protestant states.
