He brings from Spain the remnant of the Carthaginian army, and incites the Ligurians to rise against the Romans. The Romans levy three armies to defeat this cowardly commander.

204 * * B. C. Afr. Scipio crosses over from Sicily into Africa.

He has only small volunteer force, but he is joined by Masinissa, King of Numidia, who had been driven from his throne by the Carthaginians.

203 * * B. C. Afr. Scipio makes a successful attack and threatens Carthage.

* * B. C. Scipio and Hannibal make fruitless negotiations for peace.

* * B. C. Calabria. The Carthaginians recall Hannibal and his brother Mago from Italy to protect Carthage.

Hannibal massacres the Italian soldiers who refuse to go with him to Africa, and embarks at Croton for Leptis.

202 * * B. C. Afr. Scipio [Africanus] annihilates Hannibal's army at Zama, 85 miles from Carthage.

200-191 B. C. The Cisalpine Gauls and Ligurians are suppressed, and Upper Italy is again subjugated after a terrible struggle.

200-197 B. C. Second Macedonian war.

Caused by King Philip's interference by furnishing mercenaries to fight against the Romans at Zama; Rome is also entreated to become the ally of the King of Pergamus and the citizens of Rhodes and Athens against oppressions of Philip.

200 * * B. C. Aust. P. Sulpicius Galba lands at Apollonia in Illyria. His fleet guards Piræus and threatens Embœca.

* * B. C. Via Æmilia is constructed as a military road from Ariminum [Rimini] to Placentia (N. It.).

* * B. C. Placentia is nearly destroyed by the Gauls.

* * B. C. Gr. Philip V. is repulsed by the Romans before Athens, and driven out of Central Greece.

199 * * B. C. Gr. The Ætolians and the Achaean join the Romans against the Macedonians.

198 * * B. C. Gr. Flaminius takes command of the army and subdues Epirus.

197 * * B. C. Philip V. routed (p. 1026). Philip gives up all possessions beyond Macedonia, and agrees to pay 1,000 talents ($1,250,000) in ten years, and to limit his army to 5,000 soldiers, and to retain only five ships of war. Thereby Macedonia is degraded to a second-rate power.

196 * * B. C. The Insubres, north of the Po, are subdued.

192-189 B. C. War with Antiochus III. of Syria.

He refuses to restore the Egyptian provinces to Rome. The Achaean League supports the Romans, who also find allies in the Macedonians, Eumenes II., King of Pergamum, and in Rhodes.

191 * * B. C. Antiochus defeated (p. 1026).

* * B. C. Consul Manlius Acilius Glabrio lands in Epirus, and marches into Thessaly.

* * B. C. The Romans conquer the Boii, of Cisalpine Gaul; 32,000 are killed.

* * B. C. Gr. The Etruscans are surprised and defeated by Marcus Procius Cato in a mountain pass. Later besieged in Naupactus [Lepanto]. Also again defeated in a naval battle near Chios. [190. They submit.]

190 * * B. C. Asia M. The Rhodian allies defeat the fleet of Antiochus III., commanded by Hannibal the Carthaginian, at the mouth of the Eurymedon.

* * B. C. Asia M. The combined fleets of Rhodes and Rome under L. Æmilius defeat the Syrian fleet commanded by Antiochus III. at Myonessus.

* * B. C. Asia M. The Romans are victorious at Magnesia (p. 1025).

171-168 B. C. Third Macedonian war (p. 1028).

* * B. C. Turk. The Romans make three unsuccessful campaigns against Persus, son of Philip V.

168 * * B. C. Turk. Lucius Æmilius Paulus obtains command, restores discipline, and drives back Macedonians.

June 22, B. C. Battle of Pydna (p. 1028).

* * B. C. Turk. Samothrace is taken by Paulus; and the conquest of Macedonia is completed.

* * B. C. Aust. The Romans subdue Genthus, King of Illyria, an ally of Persens, and divide his kingdom.

154±-140± B. C. Sp. War with the Lusitanians.

150 * * B. C. Asia. Demetrius Soter is defeated and slain by Alexander Balas, the usurper.

149-146 B. C. The third Punic war.

It is caused by the Carthaginians making an attack on Masinissa, the King of Numidia, an ally of Rome, who seized their territory. Carthage is destroyed.

149 * * B. C. Afr. Two Roman armies land at Utica, 25 miles from Carthage.

The Carthaginians deliver up their arms and war-ships, but refuse to abandon their city, and establish a new town 10 miles from the sea. With patriotic ardor they proceed to manufacture arms and prepare for war. All ranks and ages and both sexes unite in the struggle.

* * B. C. Having constructed a new fleet, they repel an attack of the Romans in the harbor. The Romans besiege Carthage.

148-146 B. C. Fourth Macedonian war.

The Macedonians, led by Andriscus, the alleged Philippus, brother of Persus, revolt against the Romans.

147-139 B. C. Sp. War in Lusitania against the brave chief Viriathus; it ends in his betrayal and death.

147 * * B. C. Afr. Publius Cornelius Scipio Æmilianus Africanus Minor, the adopted son of P. Cornelius Scipio Africanus and son of Æmilius Paulus, assumes command against Carthage. [46. Captured and burned; survivors, slaves.]

* * B. C. Asia. Alexander I. (Balas) is defeated by Ptolemy Philometor (p. 652).

* * B. C. Egypt formally acknowledges the suzerainty of Rome.

167 * * B. C. Asia M. The Romans punish their unfaithful allies, Eumenes of Pergamum, and Rhodes, and take all their territory on the mainland (p. 1029).

* * B. C. Rome. The Senate, as guardian of both powers, interferes in a war between Egypt and Syria; C. Popillius Laenas, the Roman ambassador, arrogantly orders Antiochus V., King of Syria, to abandon the march on Alexandria (p. 652.)

155 Jan. 1, B. C. Rome. Consuls henceforth enter office on this day, pay sacrifice to Jupiter Olympus, after which the Senate convenes in solemn session.

ARMY—NAVY.

146 * * B. C. Tark. Metellus defeats the revolting Macedonians, led by Andronicus, an alleged son of Perseus, in two battles, and takes him prisoner. [Twice defeated. Corinth falls.] (P. 1023.)

* * B. C. Greece is completely subjugated.

143-31 B. C. Rome. Civil wars.

143-33 B. C. Sp. War with the Celtiberians, called Numantines; it ends in the destruction of Numantia.

143 * * B. C. Sp. Q. Cæcilius besieges the fortified city of Numantia in vain; he is succeeded by less competent generals.

135-132 B. C. First servile war.

The terribly maltreated slaves of Sicily rise against the Romans.

134 * * B. C. Sp. Publius Cornelius Scipio Æmilianus Africanus Minor assumes command of the besiegers.

133 * * B. C. Sp. Scipio starves the Numantines into submission.

132 * * B. C. Sicily. Eunus, leader of the slaves, is captured, and dies in prison.

125-113 B. C. The Romans conquer the southeastern portion of Transalpine Gaul.

119 * * B. C. Aust. The Teutones and Cimbrî defeat the Romans in Illyria.

113-101 B. C. Invasion of Northern tribes.

Romans are at war with the 300,000 invading Cimbrî, Teutones, and Gauls. [113. The army of Consul Cneius Papirius Carbo is overwhelmed and annihilated near Noreja. 102. They defeat the Romans under M. Junius Silanus, near the Rhine.]

111-106 B. C. Afr. The Jugurthine war in Numidia.

109-109 B. C. Afr. Jugurtha, the usurper, defeats a Roman army under Aulus Posthumus, and sends it under the yoke; he dictates a peace which is rejected by the Senate.

109 * * B. C. Afr. Quintus Metellus assumes command of the Romans, and is more successful; he defeats Jugurtha in Numidia. [107. Again defeated.]

108-63 B. C. Asia M. The Mithridatic war between Rome and Mithridates, King of Pontus.

He had attacked Paphlagonia, Cappadocia, and Bithynia, which were client states of Rome, and massacred the people.

107 * * B. C. Afr. Marius conquers the Gætulians in Numidia. He repulses a combined attack of Jugurtha and Bocchus, king of Mauretania, his ally, at Cirta. Bocchus I. treacherously delivers Jugurtha up to Marius.

107 * * B. C. Switz. The Tigurini defeat Consul Lucius Cassius Longinus on the Garonne, and destroy his army.

105 Oct. 6. B. C. Fr. The hordes of Germans and Helvetians defeat and annihilate two large Roman armies in southern Gaul; one under Q. Servilius Cæpio and M. Mallius Maximus at Arausic [Orange] on the Rhone.

104 * * B. C. Fr. Consul Marius reorganizes his army in the Provincia Narbonensis [Provence], and prepares for a struggle with the barbarians.

103 * * B. C. Ger. The Cimbrî, with the Teutones and Helvetian tribes of Germany, invade Italy in two bodies.

103-99 B. C. Sicily. Second servile insurrection under Tryphon and Athenion; put down by Nepos Aquilius.

102 * * B. C. Fr. Marius covers the two military roads (Pass of the Little St. Bernard and the shore road).

* * B. C. Barbarians defeated (p. 662).

* * B. C. Marius crosses the Alps to reinforce Quintus Lutatius Catulus against the other band of invaders.

101 July 30. B. C. Battle of Verceilæ [Raudine Plains].

Marius and Catulus join their forces in Lombardy, and overwhelm and annihilate the Cimbrî, who lose 90,000 killed and prisoners.

92 * * B. C. Asia M. Sulla, the proconsul of Cilicia, attacks Mithridates VI., and reinstates the king of Cappadocia.

89-89 B. C. The Social War.

Rome is at war with the Marsi and other Italian allies in Central and Southern Italy, who are denied the privileges of Roman citizenship.

90 * * B. C. Marsius defeats the Marsi and other Sæbellians.

* * B. C. Cneius Pompeius Strabo defeats the Marsi, after first suffering defeat himself.

89 * * B. C. The Romans triumph in the north, and the war ends; Sulla succeeds in the south, capturing Bovianum. [88. War nearly ends in the south.]

88-82 B. C. Rome. Civil war between the rivals Sulla and Marius.

88 * * B. C. Demagogues use the populace to dismiss Sulla from chief command of the army, and give it to Marius.

Sulla gathers an army in Campania of dissatisfied Italians, liberated slaves, and others; Rome surrenders, and his enemies are given up to slaughter, plunder, and outrages for five days; Marius escapes to Africa.

88-84 B. C. First Mithridatic war.

It is caused by the encroachment of Mithridates VI., King of Pontus, the ruler of Thrace, Bithynia, Macedonia, and Greece, as well as by the rashness of Roman officials. Pontus has an army of 250,000 infantry, 40,000 cavalry, besides a fleet of 400 vessels (p. 1028).

88 * * B. C. Asia M. Mithridates routs Nicomedes, King of Bithynia, on the River Amnias. He defeats Opulius, Cassius, and Aquilius.

87 * * B. C. Sulla assumes command in the Mithridatic war.

80 * * B. C. Athens. The library of Apollonius is sent to Rome by Syria.

SOCIETY.

135-132 B. C. Sicily. The terribly maltreated slaves rise in rebellion.

133 * * B. C. Rome. Sempronius Græchus makes laws favorable to the poor.

* * B. C. Slaves greatly increase in consequence of successful wars.

121 * * B. C. Rome. Three thousand democratic prisoners are strangled.

105 * * B. C. Rome. Jugurtha, the captured Numidian king, is led in triumph, and then sent to prison to die of hunger.

STATE.

146 * * B. C. Afr. Carthage with the north coast becomes the seventh Roman province.

* * B. C. Gr. The return of 300 prominent Achæans from Italy after a captivity of 16 years stir all the cities, and the Achaean league attacks Sparta, with whom the Romans take sides.

* * B. C. Rome. Th. Senate declares the Achaean league dissolved (p. 1029).

* * B. C. Gr. Corinth is in part given to Sicyon, and in part transformed into Roman public land.

* * A. C. Rome. Other Greek cities retain their own administration in subordination to the governor of Macedonia, and as tribute cities to Rome.

* * B. C. Turk. Macedonia is made the eighth Roman province. [Greece and Achaia are afterward added.]

143-31 B. C. The universal power of Rome is firmly established.

133 * * B. C. Asia M. Attalus III. of Pergamus bequeaths his kingdom and wealth to the Romans. (R. Province.)

133-121 B. C. Rome. Civil disturbances are led by the Gracchi.

Tiberius Scipionis, Gracchus and his brother, Caius Scipionis, urge political and social reforms by revolutionary means. The peasantry are crowded out of the rural districts by the slave labor of the rich, who chiefly monopolize the land. Rome is full of an idle rabble, who live on bribes and the gifts of grain. The public offices and senatorial positions are controlled by family cliques.

Tiberius proposes the reenactment of the Licinian agrarian law, with slight change, for the subdivision of land in favor of poor tenants; the tribune, Marcus Octavius, resists, and is deposed by an unconstitutional decree of the people. The people accept the law, and entrust its execution to the Gracchi and Appius Claudius.

133 * * B. C. Rome. Tiberius Gracchus is elected tribune of the people.

He proposes, in a popular assembly, to divide the treasures bequeathed by the King of Pergamus among the new land-owners, for purchasing necessary equipment, by using the Senate has the control of such bequests.

* * B. C. Rome. Popular laws are proposed for shortening the term of military service and extending the right of appeal.

133-129 B. C. The division of the public lands under the agrarian laws is partially carried out. The democracy and optimates continue the struggle for supremacy.

132 * * B. C. Rome. Tiberius, in defiance of the Constitution, attempts to secure a reelection to the tribunate; the Senate violently interposes and stops the election. Tiberius and 300 followers are killed by the optimates.

* * B. C. Rome. Two Plebeian consuls are chosen.

129 * * B. C. Asia M. Pergamus becomes a Roman province called Asia.

* * B. C. The political murder (?) of P. Scipio Emilianus, leader of the optimates, occurs.

125 * * B. C. Rome. The Senate sends the democratic consul, M. Fulvius Flaccus, to fight the Gauls, in order to put him out of its way, he having proposed to give the right of citizenship to all Italians. He establishes land communication between Italy and Spain, and lays the foundation of Roman rule in Transalpine Gaul.

123 * * B. C. Fr. The proconsul Sextus finds the colony of Aquæ Sextiæ [Aix].

* * B. C. Med. Sea. The Balearic Islands become subject to Rome.

* * B. C. Caius Gracchus, the questor of Sardinia, openly declares himself an enemy of the Senate, and returns to Rome; he is elected tribune of the people.

He attempts to execute the social reforms proposed by his brother, and is charged with attempting to subvert the Constitution.

* * B. C. Rome. Jury duties transferred from the order of senators to that of the equites, which further divides the two branches of the aristocracy.

* * B. C. Rome. Colonies are sent out by the decrees of the people, instead of the decrees of the Senate.

* * B. C. Rome. The Senate favors the tribune, M. Livius Drusus, to undermine the popularity of Gracchus.

123 * * B. C. Caius Gracchus makes new roads, marked by mile-stones, throughout the empire.

122 * * B. C. Rome. C. Gracchus secures his election to the tribunate for the second time.

* * B. C. Rome. Roman citizenship is denied.

The motion of C. Gracchus and M. Fulvius Flaccus, his colleague, to grant the rights of citizenship to all Latins, and Latin rights to other Italians, is defeated by the combined effort of the Senate and the lower classes of Rome. Gracchus also fails of election as tribune for the third year.

121 * * B. C. Rome. Civil war is occasioned by political murders.

C. Gracchus and M. Fulvius and several hundred followers are killed. Power is now restored to the Senate.

* * B. C. Rome. M. Livius Drusus removes the ground rent, and repeals the law prohibiting the alienation of assignments of public land, which permits the optimates to repurchase their confiscated lands.

120 * * B. C. Fr. Gallia Narbonensis (S. and S. E. Gaul) becomes a Roman province.

116 * * B. C. Fr. Narbo Martius founds the colony called Gallia Narbonensis [Provence]. Tolosa is also settled.

* * B. C. Afr. Jugurtha buys a peace from the consul, L. Calpurnius Bestia, but the Senate refuses to ratify it.

115 * * B. C. It. The people of Genoa [Genoa] submit to the Romans.

111 * * B. C. Afr. The Senate's commissioners are bribed to assist Jugurtha in his struggle for the throne of Numidia.

He captures Cirta from his rival, and puts to death the entire male population, including many Italians, which excites indignation, and provokes war at Rome.

* * B. C. Rome. Agrarianism fails; a law is passed making all land still held in occupation private land.

107 * * B. C. Rome. C. Marius receives the comitia and chief command of the army, notwithstanding the opposition of the aristocracy. [104-100. He is elected consul five times in succession.]

105 * * B. C. Rome is terrorized by the annihilation of two armies in Gaul. The democratic leaders denounce the incapable generals of the optimates, especially Cæpio and Maximus.

104 * * B. C. Rome. The comitia receive the power to elect the priests.

* * B. C. Rome. A new military system is adopted.

The Servian military organization, making military service a tax on property, is abolished; a citizen levy is substituted, supplemented by a recruiting system, and reinforcements from subject and vassal princes.

100 * * B. C. Rome. Marius is elected consul for the sixth time.

He seeks to overthrow the Constitution, and make himself king. He joins

C. Servilius Glaucia, and L. Appuleius Saturninus, the leaders of the people.

* * B. C. Rome. Saturninus, as tribune, by violent means procures a division of lands among the veterans of Marius.

* * B. C. Rome. The consul, Q. Metellus, goes into voluntary exile. [99. Recalled.]

98 * * B. C. Rome. Marius loses his popularity; hated by both parties, he retires to Asia.

91 * * B. C. Rome. Three bills are brought forward by Marcus Livius Drusus, the tribune of the Plebeians.

One is for the reform of the law courts and enlarging the Senate, another for a new division of public lands, a third bestowing the right of citizenship on Italians. Drusus is assassinated.

* * B. C. The Italian allies revolt.

Except the Latins, most of the Etruscans, and some southern cities, because of the assassination of Drusus.

90 * * B. C. Rome. The contending parties become reconciled in the presence of danger arising from the revolt. Repeated levies are made, and citizens and freedmen are enrolled in the armies; the war is popular with both parties.

* * B. C. The enfranchisement of Italy begins. The right of citizenship is granted to all the Latins, and to all who had not revolted.

60 * * B. C. Caesar's daughter, Julia, 23 years of age, is given to Pompey in marriage, thus uniting with family ties the two popular leaders.

STATE.

84 * * B. C. Sulla makes a treaty of peace with Mithridates (p. 1029).

* * B. C. Rome. Caius Papirius Carbo Marius and the younger Sertorius become leaders of the democratic party.

83 * * B. C. Rome. Lucius Cornelius Scipio and Caius Norbanus, two incapable men, are elected consuls.

82 * * B. C. Rome. Sulla causes himself to be appointed dictator for an unlimited time, in order to reorganize the commonwealth.

Another reign of terror follows; proscription lists are made of the evil-minded. Sulla outlaws 4,700 citizens, and confiscates their property. Allotments of land are made to his veterans; military colonies are established with full rights of citizenship among the territories dominated by the hostile party, whose rights of citizenship are abrogated.

Sulla attempts a conservative aristocratic reform of the government.

The Senate is reorganized; 300 additional members are to be chosen by the comitia tributa; 20 questors to be annually elected by the same. The censor's privilege of revising the roll of the Senate every five years is abolished. [72. Restored.] Senators are made irremovable, and places in the juries restored from the equites to the Senate.

The power to elect the priests is withdrawn from the comitia. Sulla abolishes the Servian order of voting.

81 * * B. C. Rome. Sulla permits the election of consuls, but retains to himself the office of dictator, and conducts the government.

80 * * B. C. Rome. Sulla causes himself and Quintus Cæcilius Pius Metellus, one of his generals, to be elected consuls. [79. He voluntarily abdicates, and retires to private life. 78. Dies.]

74 * * B. C. Asia M. Bithynia is bequeathed to the Romans by Nicomedes III.; it becomes a Roman province.

* * B. C. Asia M. Mithridates VI. declares war, because of the aggressions of Tigranes of Armenia, who takes possession of Cappadocia and Syria; also because of the bequest of Nicomedes III., hestowing Bithynia on the Romans.

70 * * B. C. The consuls Marcus Licinius Crassus and Pompey (the Great) restore to the tribunate the privileges withdrawn by Sulla.

* * B. C. Rome. The Sullan Constitution is overthrown.

The Aurelian law is passed; jurors are no longer to be taken exclusively from senators; one-third are to be senators, and two-thirds men belonging to the equestrian census.

67 * * B. C. Cyrene and Crete become provinces of Rome. (74 B. C.; 27 B. C. United.)

* * B. C. Pompey and all the public treasures and the resources of all the provinces and client states placed unconditionally at his disposal, for the suppression of piracy, which nearly paralyzes commerce.

* * B. C. Rome. Julius Cæsar is questor. [65. Curule edile; 63. Pontifex maximus.]

66-62 B. C. Rome. Conspiracy of Catiline.

The democrats, led by M. Crassus and Caius Julius Cæsar, unite with the anarchists, led by Lucius Sergius Catiline an expretor. The democrats urge the overthrow of the existing government before the return of Pompey; and the anarchists urge the cancellation of debts, the proscription of the wealthy, and the confiscation of their property.

66 * * B. C. Rome. Catiline's first conspiracy to murder the consuls fails through the indecision of conspirators, and because of Cicero's eloquence.

65 * * B. C. Syria. Pompey dethrones King Antiochus Asiaticus.

64 * * B. C. Rome. The conspiracy of Catiline is renewed, and fails.

It is proposed to defeat Cicero, and secure the election of Catiline and Caius Hybrida Antonius at the consular elections for 63, by the influence of Cæsar and Crassus; Antonius alone secures election, and is detached from the conspirators by Cicero, his colleague.

63 * * B. C. Rome. Cicero is elected consul by the middle class of citizens.

* * B. C. Rome. Catiline conspires with others to murder his competitors at the consular election for 62, also the consul, Cicero, who would preside over it.

Cicero is informed of the conspiracy by his spies and on the day of the election exposes and denounces it, before the Senate, having armed guards present.

(NOV. 8.) Cicero delivers his first speech in the Senate against the conspiracy of Catiline, who flees in the night to the insurgent army of C. Manlius in Etruria.

(NOV. 9.) Cicero makes his second speech against Catiline to the people.

(*) Arrest of the accomplices, Lentulus, Cethegus, Gabinius, Statilius, and Cæparius.

(DEC. 3.) Cicero makes his third speech against Catiline to the people.

(DEC. 5.) Cicero makes his fourth speech against Catiline in the senate. The senate decrees that the conspirators shall be strangled in person without trial; Cæsar votes against it; Cato's speech secures the vote. Pompey, Cicero executes the imprisoned conspirators, and is greeted as pater patriæ.]

* * B. C. Judea is made tributary. Syria and Cilicia (1023), capitol, Tarsus, become Roman provinces. [65. Pontus.]

62 * * B. C. Rome. Julius Cæsar administers the pretorship.

* * B. C. Rome. The Senate disaffects Pompey toward the government by refusing to grant the allotment of lands he requests for his veterans.

61 * * B. C. Sp. C. Julius Cæsar goes to Hispania Ulterior as propretor.

He lays the foundation of his military fame, and secures much money; he refuses a triumph on his return.

60 * * B. C. Rome. The first triumvirate is formed by Pompey, Cæsar, and Crassus. [59. They secure the election of Cæsar as consul. The republic is powerless in the hands of these citizens.]

* * B. C. Cæsar receives the government of Gallia Cisalpinga and Illyricum by a popular decree, for five years, with extraordinary powers. On the motion of Pompey the senate adds Gallia Narbonensis [S. Fr.] to his province.

* * B. C. Rome. Aulus Gabinius (favorable to Pompey) and Lucius Calpurnius Piso, the father-in-law of Cæsar, are elected consuls for the next year.

59 * * B. C. Rome. Cæsar proposes an agrarian law especially favoring Pompey's veterans.

It is opposed by his colleague, M. Bibulus, an optimiste, and also by the Senate; this law is the subject of the oration of the deus of Asia are both submitted to the popular as-semblies, where they are passed upon without the consent of the Senate.

58 * * B. C. Rome. Publius Clodius, the tribune of the people, procures the absence of Marcus Porcius Cato and Cicero from Rome.

Cato is sent to possess the Kingdom of Cyprus by a popular vote. Cicero is outlawed for executing a Roman citizen without a legal trial (see 63 B. C.). Clodius causes Cicero's house to be burned, and both his Tuscan and Fomicean estates to be ravaged.

57-52 B. C. Rome. The partizans of Clodius and Titus Annius Milo create tumults.

57 * * B. C. The recall of Cicero is procured by the efforts of the tribune Milo, to assist in opposing Clodius (democrat). Cato also returns.

56 * * B. C. Cæsar, Pompey, and Crassus, with 200 senators belonging to their party, meet in Luca (in Tuscany), and renew the triangular alliance.

* * B. C. Rome. Pompey and Crassus are elected consuls for the year 55 by the use of force, in harmony with the plans adopted at Luca.

55 * * B. C. Rome. Democratic decrees are issued.

The people decree the government of both Spain to Pompey for five years, and that of Syria to Crassus, and they extend Cæsar's proconsulship in Gaul for five years; they decree the payment by the state of troops recruited by Cæsar on his own authority. The aristocratic party are unable to resist.

54 * * B. C. Asia. Crassus, having closed his year as consul, goes to Syria as ruler.

52 * * B. C. Rome. Disorders prevail.

The armed democratic bands of Clodius patrol the streets of Rome, and are opposed by the armed bands of Milo. In the aristocratic reaction. Clodius and Milo meeting in Via Appia occasions a fight between their followers, in which Clodius is wounded, and at Milo's command put to death.

* * B. C. Fr. The Gauls revolt (p. 662). [50. Suppressed.]

52-51 B. C. Rome. Pompey is selected sole consul; dictatorial power is given him to put down the unruly mobs. [51. Sept. 30. He enters Rome, and is given a third magnificent triumph.]

* * B. C. Rome. Cæsar, the leader of the democracy, and Pompey, the leader of the republican aristocracy, are alienated from each other.

Pompey selects his new father-in-law, Metellus Scipio, for his colleague in the consulate, and extends his governorship in Spain for five years, claiming as a pretext the necessity of the Partian war (now victoriously ended); he weakens Cæsar's command by recalling two legions.

51 * * B. C. The alliance of Cæsar, Pompey, and Crassus is renewed.

Caused by an attempt of the republicans in the Senate to free themselves from the influence of their rulers, and to revise the agrarian law which was passed while Cæsar was consul.

* * B. C. Fr. Aquitania, Gaul becomes a Roman province. [27. Lugdunensis.]

49 Jan. 1. Rome. Cæsar makes his last offer of compromise with the Senate.

The Senate demands that he resign his proconsulship, and become a private citizen before his term expires, as the Gallic war is ended, that he disband his legions on pain of outlawry. [War follows.]

ARMY — NAVY.

49 * * B. C. Cæsar is reinforced by a second legion.

The two legions successfully march through Umbria, Picenum, and Apulia to Brundisium. Cordium, under Domitius, is captured while on the way.

* * B. C. Cæsar, strengthened by a third legion, besieges Brundisium, and leaves three new legions. The rapidity of his movements bewilders his foes.

INDEX AND APPENDIX.

EXPLANATORY NOTES.

THE index has been prepared with uncommon fullness of detail, so as to aid those persons who may turn in haste to find desired information; also to give necessary information to those having none of the clews which a general historical knowledge affords. But it is anticipated that many readers who are familiar with the general trend of the history will commonly ignore the index altogether and turn at once to the text, where their search will be facilitated by its topical classification; then by glancing at the dates and the helpful locality words, which stand as double guide-posts before each item, they will speedily find the desired information.

The index also contains some items which were omitted from the text. These are limited almost entirely to dates, which are always enclosed in parentheses so that they can be distinguished from page numerals.

The following rules which have been observed in preparing the index may aid the reader in its practical use.

Abbreviations. Only a few arbitrary abbreviations have been used. See the full list facing page 1.

Books. The titles of books are not indexed, but may be found by following the references under the author's name.

Colleges. The larger American and British colleges are indexed twice; once under the name of the city, and more fully under the name of the college or university. The smaller colleges and many foreign universities are only indexed under the name of the city of their location. Colleges connected with universities are only referred to under the name of the university to which they are attached, as, "Christ's College" is indexed under "Oxford University."

Conventions. Commercial, political, and other conventions are indexed under the name of the body convened, and not under the name of the city. Exception: national conventions of political parties are important items in the history of cities, and they are indexed under the names of the cities where convened, as well as under the party name.

Countries. Each country appears in the text as an abbreviated history, therefore it is not again abbreviated in the index. But items in foreign countries are cross-indexed under the name of the country to which they relate, to give a fuller history; if the items are duplicates of others, they are omitted in the index.

Italics. Italics are used in the index as in the text, for the titles of books, magazines, and newspapers; also for titles of paintings, names of vessels and horses, and names of planetary bodies.

Legislation. Acts of State legislation are indexed under the names of States; those of the National Congress under the titles of the Acts.

Local Events. Events of only local interest are indexed under the names of the towns or cities in which they occur, and also under the names of the persons directly connected with each occurrence.

Names. The name of every town and city is indexed in its alphabetical order; every personal name is also indexed except those remotely or perfunctorily connected with an event.

Newspapers, etc. The names of newspapers are commonly indexed under the name of the place of publication; the denominational papers are indexed under the names of the denominations who publish them; some others appear under their own name.

Personal Names. Full personal names are commonly given in the index, but often abbreviated in the text, especially those of Europeans, Asiatics, and South Americans. Members of the British peerage are commonly indexed under their family names, these are often less familiar than the title name; but the former may be readily found by following the references given under the title name, as under "Palmerston, Viscount," may be found "See Temple, John Henry."

Religious Assemblies. These are commonly indexed under the denominational name, as "General Assembly" under "Presbyterians." Church councils of world-wide interest are indexed under councils; some unusual or very important national gatherings are indexed under their proper titles.

Religious Denominations. Various religious denominations having a common family name are grouped in the index; under the general name, as "Cumberland Presbyterians" follow "Presbyterians."

States. States forming a component part of a country, as Virginia, or Hungary, are quite fully indexed, thereby forming a skeletonized State history. These references may be much extended at the option of the reader, by turning to the references found under the names of important cities, as Albany, Buffalo, and New York City to obtain a fuller history of New York State.

INDEX AND APPENDIX.

NOTE.—The numerals enclosed with parentheses are year-dates; the abbreviations are chiefly those in familiar use, but a full list may be found on the opposite page. Text-figures denote page; superior figures indicate column.
