[The sentence is not executed.]

STATE.

1849 * * The revised Constitution of the German Empire is completed.

It provides for a Diet composed of a chamber of state, and also a popular chamber; the former consisting of two classes of representatives, one half to be elected by the separate states, and the other half appointed by the Government, while the monarch has only a suspensive veto over its acts; the popular chamber is to be elected by universal (manhood) suffrage.

* * Two popular parties are formed, the Great German and Small German.

The first favors the inclusion of Austria, and the latter its exclusion, because of the preponderance its states would have, and thereby a smaller confederacy under the hegemony of Prussia.

Mar. 4. Aust. A general constitution for Austria is promulgated (p. 523).

Mar. 24. Prus. The king formally recognizes the claims of Schleswig-Holstein.

Mar. 28. Frankfort. The German National Assembly elects the King of Prussia "hereditary emperor of the Germans."

Apr. 3. Prus. Reaction of imperialism.

King William Frederick, not having the consent of all the German states, declines the imperial crown of the Germans, which is offered to him by a deputation of the National Assembly at Frankfort; his act grieves the people.

CHURCH.

1872 * Berlin. Government disputes arise with the Roman Catholic clergy because of their support of papal infallibility; the bishop of Ermland's salary is ordered to be suspended.

1873 Feb. * The archbishops of Cologne and Gnesen and Posen issue a declaration against contemplated legislation on church affairs.

Mar. 12. Berlin. The Reichstag declares the church in subjection to the state.

May 11. Berlin. Dr. Falk, minister of public worship, secures the passage of the May Laws.

They require candidates for the clerical office to undergo a certain amount of secular training at the universities, and the sanction of the secular authorities to all ecclesiastical appointments; also providing for a royal tribunal for ecclesiastical matters; the Pope declares these laws invalid. (See State.)

* A severe struggle occurs with the Roman Catholic clergy in establishing the supremacy of the state.

Many penalties imposed, refractory bishops imprisoned, deposed, and banished, and financial support withdrawn from the clergy; religious orders dissolved, and laymen are made administrators of church property instead of the clergy.

June 1. The Old Catholics elect their first bishop, Dr. Joseph Reinkens. [Aug. * He is recognized by the emperor and other powers.]

Aug. 7. The Pope writes the emperor complaining of ecclesiastical persecutions, and asserting his authority over all baptized persons.

Sept. 3. Berlin. The emperor sends a letter to the Pope justifying the Ministry and Government, and asserting that there is no mediator between God and man but Jesus Christ.

Sept. 18. Switz. A Congress of Old Catholics is held at Constance.

[1874, Sept. 6, at Freiburg, Hanover; 1875, Aug. 12, at Bonn, Prussia; 1877, Sept. 28, at Mentz, Hesse; 1880, Sept. 19*, at Baden.]

Oct. * Fines are imposed on Archbishop Ledochowski of Gnesen and Posen for threatening to excommunicate a professor, and on Archbishop Melchers for ordaining priests without permission of the Government.

1874 Feb. 3. Archbishop Ledochowski is imprisoned for his hostility to the May Laws. [Apr. 15. Deposed.]

Mar. 30. Rh. Prus. The Government arrests Archbishop Melchers of Cologne for resisting the May Laws.

1066 Jan. 5. Edward the Confessor dies.

Jan. 6-Oct. 14. Harold II., son of Godwin and brother-in-law of Edward the Confessor, reigns.

* * On the death of Edward, William, Duke of Normandy, claims the crown because of the alleged bequest of Edward the Confessor; by an oath taken by Harold about 1064 pledging himself to marry William's daughter, and to secure the succession to William; and by the right of Matilda his wife, a descendant of Alfred.

1066-1154 The Norman line.

1066-87 William I., the Conqueror, reigns.

[1066, Dec. 25. Crowned at Westminster.] He subjugates the Anglo-Saxons with terrible severity and robbery of estates. Two nationalities—French and English—exist side by side, Merca and Northumberland alone remaining aloof.

1067 * * (or 1070). The Court of Chancery is re-founded by William I.

* * Taxes in specie are introduced by William I.; he raises them arbitrarily.

1067-73 W. Bledddyn reigns. [1073. Trahaern ap Caradoc. 1079-1137. Grifith ap Cynan.]

* * Arfastus, or Herefast, chaplain to the king, is appointed lord chancellor.

At this time [and to a much later period] the chancellor is merely a state functionary who admits suitors to the presence of the sovereign.

MISCELLANEOUS.

981 * * Ire. Waterford is destroyed by fire. [982. London. A great fire occurs. 1087. London. A great part of the city, including St. Paul's Cathedral, is destroyed by fire. 1122 May 19. Lincoln is also destroyed. Also the second abbey of Gloucester.]

* Many anti-Catholic charity schools are established for the preservation of the Protestant religion among the poor.

* Cambridge University sides against the king.

He recommends the bestowal of the degree of M. A. upon Alban Francis, a Benedictine monk, and it refuses; he commands that the presidency of Magdalen College be given to Farmer, a Roman Catholic, and it refuses to obey.

1688 Apr. * The king issues a second declaration of liberty of conscience.

[May 4. He commands it to be read in all the churches of London on May 20. Few of the clergy obey, and the people rush for the door when the reading begins.]

May 18. A great meeting of prelates and divines at Lambeth issues a temperate protest against the illegal reading of the declaration.

June 8. London. Seven bishops are sent to the Tower.

William Sancroft, Archbishop of Canterbury, and Bishops Ken, Lake, Lloyd, Turner, Trelawney, and White are brought by summons before the king on the charge of seditious libel, for refusing to read the king's declaration for liberty of conscience, by which the Roman Catholics would acquire civil and ecclesiastical rights. [June 29, 30. They are tried and acquitted.]

It proposes to incite simultaneous risings in several parts of England and Scotland, aiming to compel the king to assent to their demands for a change in the policy and proceedings of Government.

June 12. The Rye House Plot is disclosed by Josiah Keeling, one of the conspirators.

It was devised by Col. Rumsey, Lieut.-Col. Walcot, and others to assassinate the king and his brother James at Rye House farm on their return from the Newmarket races.

The Court of King's Bench decides that "the franchise and liberty of the city of London should be taken and seized into the king's hands." This is done at the instigation of the court party, who desire to have the sheriffs who select the juries nominated by the crown instead of chosen by the representatives of the city. [Other city corporations are coerced into surrendering their charters.]

June 18. London is humbled.

The mayor, sheriffs, and aldermen kneel before the king and beg clemency for the city; they are required to consent to accept the king's nominations for mayor and sheriffs in certain cases; their forfeited charter is ransomed.

Jan. 30. H. L. A motion favoring a regency is lost. Vote, 49-51. A motion denying "divine right" is carried. Vote, 53-46. A motion declaring the throne vacant is lost. Vote, 41-55.

[The question becomes an issue between the two houses; the decision of William to decline a regency, and of Mary to accept only a joint rule, brings unity.]

Feb. 13. Both houses offer the crown to William and Mary jointly, and accompany the offer with a declaration of the rights of subjects.

The declaration condemns as illegal the making or suspending laws, the levying of money for the crown, or the maintaining of a standing army, without the consent of Parliament, the erecting of a Court of Commission for ecclesiastical causes, or the granting of estates forfeited before the conviction of the offender; it claims the right of petitioning the sovereign, and bearing arms, of freedom of election, and of freedom of debate in Parliament. It demands that Parliament shall be frequently held, that excessive bail shall not be exacted, and that juries shall be impartial and returned in every trial; and it prescribes a new oath of "allegiance and supremacy," in which it is declared that "no foreign prince, person, prelate, state, or potentate, hath or ought to have, any jurisdiction, power, superiority, preeminence, or authority, ecclesiastical or spiritual, within this realm."

The Revolution is completed.

MODERN GREECE is a kingdom in southeastern Europe; the government is an hereditary monarchy, with the executive power vested in a king and seven ministers, and the legislative power in a Chamber of Deputies called the Boule, whose members are elected for four years by manhood suffrage. The common language is modern Greek, and the prevailing religion is that of the Greek church, which is the church of the state, yet all religions are tolerated. Area, 25,041 square miles; population, 2,187,208.

Historians are not agreed concerning the date of the arrival of the members of the Argyan family who first came from their Persian highlands to western Europe and poured into northern Greece.

NOTE.—The period in which Greece formed a part of the Eastern Empire is treated in these pages as forming a part of the history of Greece, thus making the record continuous from the beginning. The history of Macedonia is here included with Greece, although it formed no part of ancient Hellas.

- * * B. C. The Corinthians engage in the Persian war.
- The Peloponnesian army begins the construction of a wall across the isthmus, instead of coming to the aid of the Athenians.
- * * B. C. Xerxes meets with no resistance in central Greece; the Lœcians and Æolians submit to the Persians.
- * * B. C. The Persians ravage the land of the Phœnicians; a thunder-storm aids in turning back a force sent to Delphi.
- * * B. C. Thespiæ and Plataea alone are destroyed by the Persians, in Bœotia.
- * * B. C. Athens. The Athenians abandon their city, and send the noncombatants, together with their personal effects, to Salamis, Ægina, and Argolis; only a garrison remains in the Acropolis.
- * * B. C. Athens. Xerxes takes the Acropolis by storm; the temples and the city are burned; he enters, after having lost 200,000 of his troops.
- Sept. 20 B. C. The Grecians defeat the Persians in the Straits of Salamis.
- The Grecian fleet under Eurybiades, a Spartan, numbers 378 triremes and seven fifty-oared vessels; the Persian fleet comprises 750 (?) vessels; the Greeks lose 40 and the Persians 200 ships.
- Sicily. Gelon defeats the Carthaginians under Hamilcar at Himera.
- * * B. C. Xerxes retreats, leaving Mardonius in Thessaly with 200,000 men.
- Nov. * * B. C. Xerxes retreating, arrives at the Hellespont.
- He suffers great losses through hunger and cold; the bridge having been destroyed by a storm, his army embarks in the fleet.
- * * B. C. The Grecian fleet neglects to pursue the Persians, as Themistocles advises; it unsuccessfully besieges Andros.
- 479 * * B. C. The fourth Persian expedition led by Mardonius.
- The Persians enter Attica, and are reinforced by troops under Artabazus, and by allies from northern Greece.
- * * B. C. Athens. The Athenians are again faithfully abandoned by the Spartans, who again retire.
- * * B. C. The Persians retire before the whole Peloponnesian army, consisting of 30,000 hoplites and 60,000 light-armed troops, it having crossed the isthmus, and taken a strong position in Bœotia.
- * * B. C. The Greeks are reinforced by 10,000 Athenians, Plateans, and Thespians; Pausanias, the leader of the Spartans, has a great army, but no cavalry.
- * * B. C. The united fleets of the Peloponnesians, Athenians, and Ionic Greeks, conquer Byzantium, and acquire rich booty.
- Sept. 22 B. C. The Persians are routed at the battle of Plataea; the Greeks capture the Persian camp, and kill Mardonius and a great host.
- Sept. 22 (?) B. C. Asia M. Battle of Mycale.
- The Greeks under Leotyphides the Spartan, and Xantippus the Athenian, defeat the Persians under Mardontes, and burn his fleet. Two Persian armies are destroyed on the same day.
- * * B. C. The Greeks appear before Thebes; the leaders of the Persian party are given up and executed.
